HEAVY FIGHTING IN CHINA!

CAIRO RIOTERS LOOT AND BURN JEWISH AREAS

Youths Injure 380 in Outbreaks

BY ALEX SMALL
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 2—Window smashing, pillaging youths rioted up and down Cairo's streets for four hours today, leaving at least 380 persons injured, many stores of Jews in shambles, a synagog damaged by fire, a Catholic church partially sacked and the city's ghetto in an uproar.

It was Cairo's biggest anti-Jewish explosion of modern times and there were reports that seven persons were killed in similar rioting in Alexandria. Riots also were reported in Port Said, Suez, Tantah, Benha, Mansura, and Zagazig.

Destruction was the worst in the east end of Cairo, near the El-Azhar mosque, in the vast bazar district inhabited by poor Jews.

Surprise Police

The rioters struck where police were not prepared and at the time set by Arab groups for "Balfour day" cessation of work in protest against making Palestine a Jewish national home.

The riots began along the busy and popular shopping street, Imad ed Din, where no special precautions were taken, with the smashing of windows and looting, and an attack on a Jewish textiles and fabrics shop. In a few minutes the shop was sacked. The disorder spread swiftly thru the center of Cairo and moved eastward from the semi-European quarters into the Muski district, which is virtually unprotected because no foreigners reside there.

Every Jewish shop was gutted and every Jew caught was badly beaten. Some are expected to die. It was here that the synagog was sacked and set afire.

Premier Nokrashy Pasha was summoned to the spot and the entire Muski area was cordoned off by police. At 1:30 o'clock the riot subsided as suddenly as it had flared.

A later throng of demonstrators—20,000, according to one police estimate—tried to organize a procession to march to the Abdin palace to express their loyal pro-Arab feelings to King Farouk but police dispersed the few who succeeded in getting near the palace.

Soldiers Ordered from City

Serious clashes with American and British troops were averted because middle east authorities put the entire city out of bounds for soldiers during the day.

Detachments of five to 20 shawishes—national police—armed with laths, were posted at Cairo's rabbinical headquarters, before the principal synagogs, the Coptic and Armenian patriarchites, the National bank, the Marconi company's building, and all points judged likely to be attacked.

The United States legation said it would take care of itself and was guarded by sentries. The British embassy took no special defense measures. Detachments of troops were kept in reserve on the west bank of the Nile near the Egyptian university which is regarded as the source of most of the anti-Jewish, anti-British, and anti-American agitation.

All these points, where trouble was thought likeliest, remained undisturbed during the day and no demonstrators went near Cairo's more conspicuous synagogs. Shops along the Kasr el Nil, Cairo's fash-

U.S. Trained Army Attacks, Reds Charge

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 2 (AP)—A Chinese communist dispatch charged today that the central government's new 6th army, equipped and trained by Americans, is in action against the Reds along the southern section of the Tientsin-Pukow railroad.

It was the first accusation that American drilled and supplied Chinese troops were involved in the current strife.

Previously the Communists expressed irritation over employment of United States transports to take central government forces to Chinese communist "liberated areas."

The Chinese 6th army fought the Japanese in northern Burma ahead of construction crews building the Stilwell highway.

Large Scale Fighting

Along sections of the north-south railroad between Peiping and Hankow, which parallels the Tientsin-Pukow railroad to the east, the Communists said large scale fighting is in progress.

Communist sources told of a "great offensive" by the government aimed at opening the Peiping-Hankow line for movement of Chiang's armies to north China and Manchuria.

The Reds charged two brigades of Japanese troops were coöperating with government forces in one sector.

A government spokesman in the 12th war zone said between 100,000 and 120,000 Communists, equipped with artillery, were closing in from the northeast and south of Kweisui, capital of the rich Suiyuan province in Inner Mongolia.

Kweisui Under Siege

Kweisui is under siege, Chinese dispatches reported. The city is in grave danger, the reports said.

Communist quarters both in Chungking and Yenan charged that 800,000 government troops have been massed for a large scale offensive and that communist forces in western Honan and eastern Hopei already are encircled.

These quarters said government troops recently occupied communist held Hsiangshan, 10 miles from the Pieping north gate, "after Americans reconnoitered the terrain in two cars."

Communist successes near Chinwangtao, North China port in United States marine hands, were claimed.

Top General Heads Reds

Government dispatches said Gen. Ho Lung, one of the top communist generals was heading the seige of government held Kweisui.

Communist occupation of Kweisui would seriously interfere with any eastward drive of Government Comdr. Gen. Fu Tso-yi along the Peiping-Suiyuan railroad toward Red held Kalgan, strategic rail center lying northwest of Peiping.

Other dispatches today reported besieged Tatung, important rail junction in northern Shansi province, still as in the hands of its 10,000 nationalist defenders, despite an attack by an estimated 100,000 Reds under the reported direction of Gen. Chu Teh, communist commander in chief.

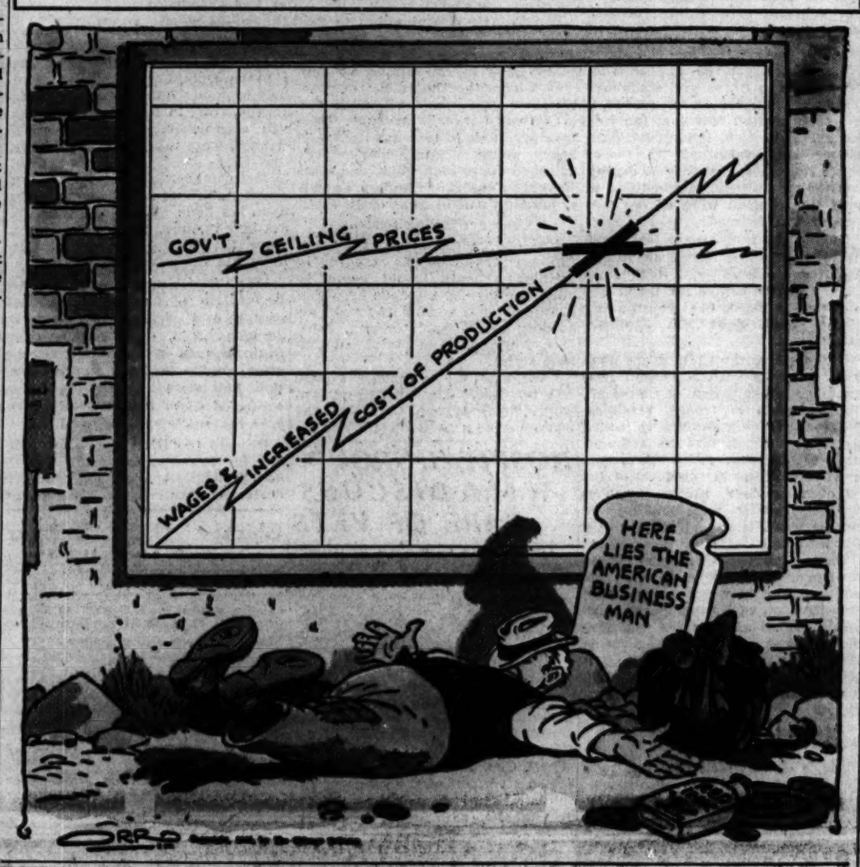
Pearl Harbor 'Gag' Stirs Senate Battle

X MARKS THE SPOT WHERE THE BODY WILL BE FOUND



GREEN, BROOKS SPUR U. S. AIR AID TO STATE

Learn City May Get Douglas Airport

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2—Gov. Green and Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.] put Illinois in on the ground floor today for the aviation advantages offered by the government's plans for disposal of its vast war time flying fields and facilities.

Summoning government officials to Sen. Brooks' office, the senator and the governor obtained at first hand details of how Illinois may develop its aviation facilities with a minimum of expenditure.

Green also discussed with members of the Illinois Republican congressional delegation the possibilities of regaining the Illinois-Michigan canal route from the federal government for use as a highway between Chicago and Peru.

City May Acquire Airport

Investigation by Green and Brooks disclosed that Chicago may acquire the Douglas airport near Park Ridge from the government at a nominal cost. Government spokesmen said there is no doubt Chicago may obtain the great airport with its extensive equipment if the city takes advantage of its opportunities.

Moreover, Illinois may almost have its choice of the 1,250 army and navy flying fields scattered thruout the state for development of aviation enterprise when the fields and their equipment are declared surplus by the government, likewise at nominal prices.

Under the law, state and municipal governments have the first chance at buying the surplus properties, many of which, in the war time aviation system, have but a limited market.

Gov. Green said he will have the state's new department of aeronautics survey the entire Illinois chain of government flying fields to determine which could be acquired advantageously by the state. It was indicated that the state may acquire some of the fields for disposal to municipalities and even to private interests.

Plan to Clear Fair Grounds

Removal of air forces equipment from the state fair grounds at Springfield and return of the property to the state in time for next year's fair was promised by Maj. Gen. George Richards, war department budget officer, one of the government officials who conferred with Gov. Green. Gen. Richards informed the governor the department plans to complete removal of scrap and surplus supplies from the air depot by Feb. 1.

Following a conference of Green with Reconstruction Finance corporation surplus property officials an agreement was reached that the RFC, air forces, and the treasury will appoint a committee to visit the fair grounds and plan a removal program.

The grounds have been used during the war for storage purposes by various federal agencies and for aviation training. Green recently prevailed upon War Secretary Patterson to halt shipments of supplies to the fair grounds.

Twenty-two Republican senators attended a luncheon given by Sen. Brooks in Gov. Green's honor at the senate restaurant.

Discuss Canal Route

Green discussed legislation for the return of the canal route with the Illinois Republicans of congress later at a reception in the Mayflower hotel. A bill providing for this return to the state, drawn by Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.], is pending in the senate.

Among those accompanying Green were Robert Dewey, director of the state's new department of aeronautics, Harold L. Stickler, attorney for the department; William V. Ward, manager of the state fair, and Don Hyndman, administrative assistant to the governor.

Believe Hess Insane; May Escape Trial

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 2 (AP)—Among interrogators of the 22 top ranking Nazis awaiting trial here, the consensus is that Rudolph Hess, once the No. 3 Nazi, is not faking his mental illness. There are indications that he might escape trial with his one-time colleagues. The trial opens Nov. 20.

One doctor still believes the former deputy fuehrer is only pretending to be an amnesia victim. He is Lt. Col. Rene H. Juchli of Amsterdam, N. Y., one of two physicians constantly watching the physical condition of the prisoners.

Arrival today of a Russian psychiatrist to examine Hess, and a proposal that a board, including at least one German psychiatrist, be created to pass on his mental condition are among numerous indications that Hess might be withdrawn as a defendant.

"I Don't Remember"

Hess is emaciated and now is the lightest man among the defendants, weighing less than 140 pounds.

Shortly after his arrival at Nuernberg early in October, Hess was brought face to face with Hermann Goering, Franz von Papen, Dr. Karl Haushoffer, and other old comrades.

Hess looked at each in turn and always said, "I don't remember."

Ribbentrop Irritable

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 2 [Reuters]—Joachim von Ribbentrop, former German foreign minister, is becoming irritable and increasingly difficult to handle, British counsel here to take part in the war crimes trial said tonight.

One of the accused, Gustav von Bohlen-Halbach, head of the Krupps munitions corporation, is seriously ill and is under guard in a nursing home. The other accused are behind bars, except Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy, who is at large or dead.

Each prisoner may confer with counsel across a table, to prevent the passing of contraband, and in the presence of a guard. Any notes passed must be written in the guard's presence on paper provided by the military. This is to prevent prisoners receiving papers saturated with poison which could be sucked or chewed.

CLASH SET OFF BY NEW CURBS ON PROBE BODY

Access to Records Is Refused

BY WILLARD EDWARDS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2—The administration's gag tactics in connection with the Pearl Harbor inquiry provoked a battle on the senate floor late today.

Sen. Ferguson [top] and Sen. Brewster

Smoldering resentment of Republican minority members of the joint congressional committee investigating the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack flared into criticism of President Truman, Chairman Barkley [D., Ky.], and the committee majority, made up of Democrats.

The three hour wrangle also brought forth condemnation of the committee counsel, former Atty. Gen. William D. Mitchell, who was accused of letting the war department select its own witnesses on one phase of the investigation.

Senators Ferguson [R., Mich.] and Brewster [R., Me.], minority committee members, led the attack. Barkley spoke furiously in reply.

Denied Access to Files

The two Republicans were irate over a committee vote of 5 to 3 which followed party lines and which defeated a request by Brewster for permission to examine war department files to ascertain the truth of reports that important papers are missing.

No senator referred to the nature of these papers until Sen. George [D., Ga.], toward the end of the debate, blew the lid off with these words:

"This is a question of going into the files of the man who was President until a short time ago—the man who was President at the time of Pearl Harbor. I would hesitate myself before accepting the terrific responsibility of going into such private and confidential papers without full committee authorization."

The end of the discussion found Barkley and Brewster facing each other in the senate well, waving their arms and trying to shout each other down.

One Concession Voted

The dispute began at a secret committee session in the morning. The Democratic majority had yielded partially to criticism of their rules hampering the investigation. They voted with Republicans to petition President Truman to authorize all military, naval, and civilian personnel in the government to volunteer to the committee any information they might possess bearing upon the Japanese attack.

This had the effect of lifting restrictions in previous orders issued by the President. The new directive, if signed by the President, also would permit individual members of the committee to question prospective witnesses.

But the committee then voted down a proposal by Ferguson to permit individual committee members to examine government records.

Barkley, George, and Representatives Cooper [D., Tenn.], Murphy [D., Pa.], and Clark [D., N. C.] lined up against the minority proposal. Ferguson, Brewster, and Rep. Gearhart [R., Cal.] voted for the motion. Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] and Rep. Keefe [R., Wis.] were absent.

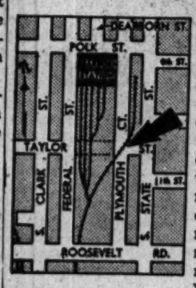
Brewster Request Denied

The same lineup defeated Brewster's request for permission to examine the war department records and several other Republican motions designed to broaden the investigating powers of individual committee members.

Blazing with indignation, Ferguson and Brewster took the senate

Charges City Streets Stolen by Railroads

Major railroad lines operated by interests in the east care little about Chicago's needs and are blocking the city's development, it was charged yesterday before the city council committee on railway terminals by William Dudley, managing director of the Greater Central District association, which embraces the loop business district.



"Stolen" Crossing

"The New York Central, Chicago & Western Indiana, and other railroads have stolen more streets in Chicago than you can count on your fingers," Dudley asserted. "The railroads are blocking developments south and west of the loop.

Get Tough, Dudley Urges

"It's time to get tough with these railroads. They don't care about Chicago. Most of them are run by the house of Morgan and other eastern banking interests. They haven't even western directors or main officers in Chicago, where they get the major part of their business."

Dudley's charge was made as the committee headed by Ald. Kovarik [15th] was considering a recommendation by a subcommittee that the ground tracks of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad crossing Plymouth ct. at Taylor st. be removed for blocking traffic and hindering development in that section.

Railroad Lacks Permit

It was disclosed at the committee meeting that the railroad is operating the tracks without any city permit or payment of any compensation to Chicago. Records showed that the last temporary permit granted the railroad for the tracks expired in 1929.

Ald. Cohen [4th] reported that the crossing gates are almost constantly lowered, hampering traffic.

Tracks a Necessity, Officer Answers

William Stokes, president of the Western Indiana road, said the tracks were needed for train operations and that the railroad planned to spend $500,000 to improve its station in the district.

Committee action was deferred for two weeks pending a report from Joshua d'Esposito, who has been commissioned by Mayor Kelly to study proposed railroad terminals.

GRACE MOORE TRIES TOEHOLD ON PROCESS SERVER AT HER DOOR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—Grace Moore, the opera singer, said tonight she slammed her dressing room door on the foot of a man she believed was trying to serve her with a subpena.

"I hope I hurt all five of his toes," Miss Moore told a reporter backstage at Constitution hall. "I'm a good, strong Tennessee hillbilly, and I pushed hard."

Fred Kirsch, a Richmond, Va., promoter, said the man was William Hannessey, a deputy United States marshal, and that he had "succeeded" in serving Miss Moore with a summons in a $100,000 breach of contract suit. Kirsch said Miss Moore "ran out" on an engagement at Richmond last year and that he filed the suit as a result. The suit was filed in United States District court here today.

Miss Moore told reporters she had been unable to appear in Richmond because she had been injured in a taxicab accident. She asked for a postponement, she said, and "thought it was all settled by my manager." Miss Moore sang the leading role tonight in the opera "La Tosca."

SON FOUND DEAD 4 DAYS AFTER HIS FATHER DIES

Donald H. Stein, 25, of 106 E. Bellevue pl., was found dead in the gas filled kitchen of his third floor apartment yesterday. His father, S. Sidney Stein, of 203 Cary st., Ravinia, member of the loop law firm of Moses, Kennedy, Stein & Bachrach, died in Evanston hospital Monday of a heart ailment.

Donald, an advertising company employe, was found seated in an easy chair before a gas oven, the jets of which were open. The chair and a foot stool apparently had been moved in from another room. He was attired only in shorts. Two penciled notes were on a kitchen table.

One note read: "God, please spare my mother, please spare my mother. God rest her soul, God rest her soul. Amen." The other note said: "That's all I owe. My mother is a saint. God bless her." His mother, Josephine, is still living.

Stein's body was discovered by Chicago av. police, summoned by Mrs. Martin Woodward, manager of the building, after another tenant, Miss Mary Boyd, who resides on the third floor, detected gas fumes. Mrs. Woodward said she last saw Stein Wednesday evening.

Two uncles of Stein expressed to police the opinion that he ended his life while despondent over his father's death. An inquest will be held at 716 N. State st. at 10 a. m. today.

5,000 Boys of Illinois' 33d Sail for Home

BY DONALD STARR
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TOKYO, Nov. 2—More than 5,000 troops of the 33d division, Illinois' own, have left Japan within the last two days on ships bound for Seattle, Wash., where they are expected to arrive before Armistice day.

On their arrival in the United States they will entrain for separation centers at Camp Grant and Fort Sheridan, Ill., and Jefferson Barracks, Mo. The homecomers will include more than 2,000 Chicagoans and Chicagolanders, many of whom have served in Hawaii, Morotai, Luzon, and Honshu.

The steamer Marine Falcon is due to arrive in Seattle Nov. 9 with 2,000. The Procyon is due the next day with an additional 400. The shipments are part of a 6th army movement which will land 10,000 troops at that port before the 15th.

The 400 men on the Procyon are particularly fortunate in light of the shipping shortage. The commander of this ship anchored near the 6th army headquarters at Kyoto and sent a message to Gen. Krueger's headquarters inquiring whether any troops were awaiting a homebound ship. Within 12 hours 400 enlisted men and 20 officers were processed. At 8 a. m. the next day the Procyon sailed for Seattle.

The Procyon's skipper plans a fast voyage because of a promise he made his own crew that they would have shore leave in Seattle on Armistice day.

PAY ROW PERILS WATER SUPPLY FOR CINCINNATI

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 2 (AP)—The city council and members of three AFL unions at the Cincinnati waterworks were in a deadlock tonight trying to solve a wage dispute before tomorrow's 9 a. m. deadline which the unions have set for a strike.

Firemen, oilers, machinists, engineers, and maintenance workers, represented by the three AFL unions, have demanded a raise in wages. Frank J. Richter, attorney for the workers, said that if 48 hours' pay for 40 hours' work is not granted, the 145 key workers will walk off their jobs.

City Manager W. R. Kellogg said if the workmen walk out, "industry will be crippled, the water supply for homes will be shut off, and fire fighting and other emergency equipment will be paralyzed."

City officials estimated a walkout would affect half a million persons.

'EASY'! GRANDMA, MA, DAUGHTER GET THEIR MAN

Portland, Ore., Nov. 2 (AP)—A grandmother, mother, and daughter—brides in a triple wedding ceremony—were honeymooning here today.

Beverly Jean Hayes, 17; her mother, Mrs. Ruth M. MacLean, 35, and her grandmother, Mrs. Anna E. Haines, 52, were married to three Portland men before a Stevenson, Wash., justice of the peace last Monday.

It started out to be a wedding just for Beverly. The grandmother married Charles H. Smith, 49, a carpenter, and the mother married George Redmond, 34, a truck driver.

"We all went to Stevenson to see Beverly marry Melvin Haldaman," explained Smith, "and when we saw how easy it was we decided—the rest of us were engaged—to be married all at once."

TOKYO TO OPEN GI DANCE HALL; 500 HOSTESSES

TOKYO, Nov. 2—The first Japanese dance hall for American GI's—complete with drinks, a floor show and 500 taxi dancers—will open tomorrow night in a big Tokyo sub-basement, giving the occupation troops supervised fraternization with Japanese femininity.

The dance hall, called "Ginza Oasis" because it is on "Ginza," the Japanese capital's 5th av., is operated by the newly created Japanese "amusement and recreation association," which plans eventually to open other such places as well as golf courses, tennis courts, and swimming pools for allied use.

It is planned to have a dance floor where American soldiers are to pay two yen [15 cents] for 10 dances with Japanese hostesses.

floor in midafternoon to charge that the committee could not function properly under such restrictive rules. They would have to tell the nation, they asserted, that the truth about Pearl Harbor could not be revealed if the Democratic majority persisted in its hamstringing methods.

"We find ourselves now at the parting of the ways," said Brewster. "Individual committee members have been deprived of rights which they must have if the whole truth is to be arrived at. Members of the Truman committee [war investigating committee headed by President Truman when he was senator] always possessed such rights and the record of that committee is proof of their value.

"We are grateful for the concession granted this morning, but we find it most disturbing that it came only after eight weeks had elapsed since the committee was created."

Limited to "Dead" Records

"We are forced to tell the people we cannot guarantee, under these handicaps, that all the truth and all the facts will be produced," said Ferguson. "We are apparently to be limited to the dead records of the Roberts commission and the army and navy boards of inquiry."

Barkley, his face red, rose to reply.

"We can't let each committee member, like a private detective, go cruising around the Pentagon and the navy department," he said. "They would be boring into all government records, seeking what they might find, and under no compulsion to inform the committee what they did find.

"The committee counsel, Mr. Mitchell, has full authority to examine these records and the duty should be left with him."

"I wish the chairman had as much confidence in the members of the committee as he has in the counsel," barked Brewster.

Testimony Restricted

"Mr. Mitchell told the war department it could select its own witnesses in connection with the incidents affecting Col. Wyman, the district engineer at Hawaii," interposed Ferguson. "Moreover, he told them to confine the testimony to engineering details and not to bring in any evidence regarding Wyman's drunkenness or any of the disloyalty phases of that chapter of Pearl Harbor."

Barkley launched into a eulogy of Mitchell, "highest legal officer of the land under a Republican President." [Mitchell was attorney general in the Hoover administration.]

"So far as missing papers are concerned," said Barkley, "that is only rumor."

"The army board report itself notes that important files and documents are missing," countered Brewster.

Army Testimony Changed

"The committee can see any paper in Washington, Hawaii, or anywhere that it wants to see!" shouted Barkley. "Or the counsel can. But it is not going to permit individual committee members to poke into private papers on their own. If we did that, we wouldn't finish the hearing until a year from Christmas."

Ferguson said the war department sent a representative around the world to interview officers after the army board had made its report and that many, including Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, had changed their testimony. He said he wanted authority to examine these statements.

George called the argument a "tempest in a teapot." He asserted he would vote for any legitimate request by an individual committee member to examine documents if he was told the purpose of the examination. He voted against Brewster in committee, he said, because he thought the Maine senator was "challenging the faith of the committee."

Ask Directive Be Modified

The committee's affirmative decision, by unanimous vote, was to send a petition to President Truman to modify a directive of Oct. 23 which ordered government departments to testify at committee hearings, when requested. The Oct. 23 order in turn had canceled a directive of Aug. 28 in which members of the military services were forbidden to give information concerning the cracking of the Japanese code or any "confidential" sections of the army and navy reports on Pearl Harbor.

Under the new directive, which committee members said they were confident the President would sign, heads of government departments, including the chiefs of staff, are ordered to authorize all persons under their control to disclose pertinent information "whether or not called to testify before the joint committee."

No Limit to Directive

Committee members said the proposed directive was limitless and applied to information derived from codes or the breaking of codes.

The committee voted to open public hearings Nov. 15. Barkley said daily sessions would continue for several weeks. The list of witnesses was not ready for publication, he added.

Elaborate rules of procedure were adopted. All evidence will be presented at public hearings. All testimony will be under oath. The committee counsel will examine witnesses first, and committee members then will put questions.

Military and naval witnesses may have their attorneys present but the lawyers may not object to questions or interrupt examinations. They may examine the witnesses after the committee is thru.

M'ARTHUR BARS 15 JAP MONOPOLIES FROM TRADING IN STOCKS

TOKYO, Nov. 2 (AP)—Japan's 15 greatest industrial and financial empires were barred today from all stock transactions until the economic control section of allied headquarters makes up its mind what to do about the Zaibatsu.

Col. Raymond O. Kramer, chief of the economic section, explained that without the freeze order the great family monopolies could easily so change their corporate structure as to defeat occupation force efforts to dissolve the Japanese trusts.

The order covered "sale, trade or other transfer or adjustment of capital stocks, bonds, debentures, voting trust or other forms of capital securities."

HE FOUGHT JAPS ONCE; NOW HE'S DEFENDING THEM

American soldiers who fought the Japanese in major battles in the South Pacific Islands are now defending them against Chinese Communists in Tientsin, China, according to Pvt. Glenn Hunolt of 421 Humphrey av., Oak Park, in a letter to his father, Edward L. Hunolt of 4529 N. Kenneth av.

"It amounts to this," he writes. "Chinese Communists are so sore at the Japs that they will attack them the minute they are permitted a chance to do so. The Japs are turning in their arms to us and darned if we aren't protecting them! There are around 80,000 Jap troops over a large area here and 100,000 Communist Chinese in the hills. It's a bit ticklish being in the middle with one division of us here and another at Tsingtao. We're fully armed and have the planes, however."

Pvt. Hunolt has been overseas 19 months and saw combat in the islands, including Okinawa.

CHINA ASKS AID TO RECAST ARMY ALONG U. S. LINES

Wedemeyer May Head Military Mission

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 2 — China is planning to reorganize her army and standardize military equipment and tactics along American lines, with the help of a United States military mission of 1,500 to 2,200 men.

Announcement of the mission, whose term was said to have been fixed for five years, is expected in military circles here following return to China of Lt. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, commander of American forces in China and chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The Chinese are understood to be receptive to appointment of Gen. Wedemeyer to head the mission.

The Chinese government has requested creation of the mission, which would continue the process begun during the war with the arrival of lend-lease equipment and establishment of a Chinese combat command.

Officers Recruited

Some members of the mission already are in China and a number of army officers have been recruited to remain behind now that the war is over. Brig. Gen. Russell Randall, former commander of the west China raiders and stationed during the war at Chengtu, is scheduled to head the aviation wing of the mission, it was learned.

During the war, except for activities of the United States air forces, American officers and troops in China mainly served to teach the Chinese to fight the Japanese rather than fight the Japanese direct.

The changes the Chinese are planning to make with American help involve reorganization of command, scaling down of troops, establishment of training centers in which American tactics will be stressed, use of American heavy guns and even alterations in the style of the Chinese soldiers' uniform, whose buttoned collar and padding for winter wear, is considered too stiff for field use.

During the war, when the Chinese air force was small, there was little coördination between ground and air activities, with the air arm operating under a separate national aeronautical commission. Growth of the air force thru the acquisition of United States planes will, it is felt, require closer harmony of command.

Fewer and Better Troops

With regard to the size of the Chinese army which now is a mixture of central and provincial troops, even during the war American advisers counseled cutting down the huge and ill equipped army to a size the country could support adequately. The original 340 Chinese divisions already have been scaled down to 263, and it is planned to stabilize the army size at 120.

The Chinese are planning to use their light weapons, but have expressed the hope of relying for heavy guns in the future on purchases from the United States until American type guns can be produced in quantity here. Arsenals here have been able to turn out light and heavy machine guns, mortars, 37 millimeter anti-tank guns, and even binoculars and range finders, as well as ammunition for guns of all sizes.

Choose Winning System

Use of American tactics by the Chinese command as taught in training schools would serve to eliminate diverse methods by which Chinese war commanders fought according to Russian, German, Japanese, American, and individual Chinese styles.

"We saw the American system win the war," one Chinese general said. "Any system that won the war must be a good system."

CHENNAULT VOICES INTEREST IN CHINESE FLYING TIGER PLAN

Miami, Fla., Nov. 2 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Chennault expressed interest tonight in a reported Chinese government proposal to set up a new air force modeled after his "Flying Tiger" organization.

He hasn't been approached on the proposal, he said, but added in an interview: "If I can be useful in China to maintain cordial relations between the United States and China, and assist China to maintain peace, I would be very much interested."

Chennault, who has retired from the army, headed the American volunteer group, the "Flying Tigers," who battled Japanese encroachments in China before Pearl Harbor. He is resting at Miami Beach before beginning a lecture tour.

Meanwhile, in Washington the army said it is not helping the Chinese to recruit discharged American air force men, but said it has no strings on men discharged in this country who decide to go back to China.

SIAM'S BOY KING TO RETURN SOON AND DON CROWN

BY ALFRED WAGG

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BANGKOK, Siam, Nov. 2—King Ananda Mahidol, 20 year old ruler of Siam, who is completing his education in Switzerland, will return to the Siamese capital this month, according to Regent Pridi Phanomyong. The regent, who led the Siamese underground movement while the country was occupied by the Japenese, said today the youthful king would be crowned shortly after his return in the most lavish ceremony this country has seen in the last 50 years.

King Ananda Mahidol

Ananda will fly back to his home in a British plane, and will return to complete his studies after 30 days.

The regent hopes the king's presence among his people will boost morale in the face of British demands for reparations which, he said, would enslave his tiny country for two generations.

Peace Treaty Deadlocked

Siamese Premier Seni Pramo disclosed today that negotiations for a peace treaty between Siam and Britain and Adm. Mountbatten's headquarters in Kandy, Ceylon, are still deadlocked. The British, he claimed, were using the technicality that Siam declared war on Britain to force unbearable demands and a commercial exploitation mission upon his little nation. He said the dealings included the United States, since the British made their demands in the name of the allies.

[Siam last August repudiated its declaration of war on the United States and Britain, declared in January, 1942, and Secretary of State Byrnes accepted the repudiation, saying that the war declaration had been made when Japan controled Siam and did not represent the will of the people.]

He said the British now are asking for repayment for all British and French losses in Siam, whether destroyed by the Japs, Siamese, or British bombers. The Siamese delegation countered with the proposal that all losses caused by the Japanese or by British bombers should be borne by the defeated Japanese.

Demand Rice for India

Furthermore the British are seen by the prime minister as forcing Siam into inflation. On the basis that Siam's pre-war income was 200 million ticals per year the British demands will run about 7 billion ticals, a tical being worth 6½ cents.

Another issue was the contribution of rice to the British which they claim is necessary to avoid famine in Bengal, India.

The center is now discharging men at the rate of more than 1,500 a day, the general said. He said the center will average about 1,600 discharges a day in November.

FILIPINOS TOSSED IN HOLE, BURIED ALIVE BY JAPS

Boy Tells Trial Court How He Escaped

BY ROBERT CROMIE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 3 [Saturday]—A young Spanish Basque who escaped from the Japanese fury that swept Manila last February after he was slugged, hand grenaded, and buried alive took the stand this morning in the war crimes trial of Lt. Gen. Yamashita.

The witness, Benjamin Urutia, told how a Japanese soldier stopped him on the street and solemnly assured him that "the Japanese and Filipinos are very good friends," then blindfolded him and led him thru a hole in a wall which he had previously noted. Inside he was suddenly smashed on the head and fell into a pit. He said he could hear others moaning, and knew that he was lying on a pile of bodies.

"Then they threw hand grenades in and I was wounded in the arm and leg. Then I felt them shoveling dirt on top of us. I could hear others still moaning, then the dirt covered me and I couldn't breathe.

"Finally I began moving around, got my head out, then scraped the blindfold off. It was already dark. At last I managed to free one leg and then found the other one caught beneath my body. My hands were still tied, but at last I managed to get loose and climb out of the hole. I hid under a house."

At least 40 persons perished in the hole, he said, some buried alive.

Girls Shout at General

The story appeared in the local papers this morning about the Chinese woman who attempted to reach Yamashita yesterday. This morning two witnesses glared and shouted at Yamashita. The second of these, who was smiling and composed on the stand, suddenly began scowling and cried at the accused: "You still have the face to look at me. If I could only get near you! You are still laughing. They all ought to be hanged—all ought to be cut to pieces."

On orders of the commission she was led from the courtroom, but returned perfectly calm, apologized to the commission, and went on with her testimony.

Yamashita was only slightly affected by her outburst, changing his position slightly. At the request of the defense, Maj. Gen. R. B. Kerr instructed the court reporter that the girl's outburst should be stricken from the record.

Jose Cabanero graphically described how he and 200 other male noncombatants were herded into an open field, tied, and then called away to be slain. Cabanero contrived to loosen his bonds and when his time came he suddenly took to his heels.

"I dashed away, zig-zagging as I went. Two sentries shot at me but missed. Then I saw a Japanese officer with a saber. I managed to sidestep, but he overtook me with his long saber, on the back of the neck." Cabanero then showed the commission's members two heavy scars on the back of his neck.

Cuts Ear Partly Off

"Then he hit me again, swinging the saber in both hands. Then he kicked me, forcing me to roll face upward. Then he hit me across the face, cutting my nose, then across my ear, taking away a part of it. I rolled on the grass and he followed me and stabbed me twice—once in each arm. When I came to it was about 10 o'clock. I waited until the sentry turned the corner and then crawled to where my family was and lay in a shelter three days without medical attention."

Yamashita sat unmoved thru the testimony, leaning forward infrequently to catch the whispered words of his interpreter.

Frederico Davantes, the next witness, escaped by swimming to mid-river despite his bound hands, standing in neck deep water from afternoon until midnight.

Girl Sees Many Slain

Natiridad Bonifacio, a teen-age girl whose father and two brothers were killed, told of seeing the bodies of many dead, including a man whose ears and nose had been cut off and whose eyes were missing.

Aquilino Rivera, 17, took the stand and showed a horrible scar across the back of his neck—the memento of a Japanese attempt to behead him after his hands had been tied and he was forced to kneel before an executioner.

A Filipino undertaker, Ricardo Esquerra, said he was seized by the Japanese and showed his pass to a one armed officer who read it and said regretfully: "This pass is good. You are a very good man. But you die—we have orders from the highest officer to kill you, all of you."

He was led to a house where he saw Japanese soldiers cutting a hole in the floor. He was blindfolded and forced to kneel. He felt a sharp blow on the back of his neck.

Shows Scar to Yamashita

The witness, requested to show the scar to the commission, stood, glared directly at Yamashita and cried: "You first! See the scar!"

Soothed by the prosecution, he told how he found himself on a pile of bodies, crawled to a corner to escape being hit by others falling from the room above, and finally crawled over the dead and made his way thru the hole into the room above and escaped.

A Chinese, Go Hong, who was taken to the same house—later burned by the Japanese—with 18 other Chinese, testified that he and three others were the only ones of the group still alive. He showed the scar of a wound which had laid his neck open four inches wide and two inches deep. He said the group included some male children.

Revolting testimony of rape, mass murder, and obscene atrocities is becoming so common in the trial that it has reached the point where even the most fantastic horrors fail to register in the minds of listeners.

Every one in the courtroom today welcomed the opportunity for the fleeting mirth afforded when one member of the prosecution staff asked a witness: "Were you able to make your escape without being killed by the Japanese?" Even the trial commission members smiled.

Ten Year Old Girl Testifies

The highlight of yesterday's session was the testimony of charming 10 year old Mary Gonzales, who, in a piping voice, related how her family's home was burned by the Japanese and she, with her mother and others—most of them killed later—were taken to a near-by house by the Japanese. All the women were segregated in the kitchen with the children and then called out one by one to be bayoneted, with the same unreasoning savagery that has characterized every case. The little witness herself was stabbed once in the arm and three times in the back.

"I fainted," she said, "and when I woke up the Japanese were gone."

Another witness in the same case told how the men were crowded into a bathroom, where the Japanese threw eight or nine hand grenades and then left, apparently thinking every one dead.

THE QUESTION

WHERE ASKED

Various locations.

THE ANSWERS

Nick Angelacos, grocer, 4201 W. Kamerling—That's one question that has been in my mind for a long time. We can't keep it a secret more than a year or so and we aren't going to get into a war within that length of time. By sharing the secret and gaining the friendship and confidence of Russia she may not have any desire to attack us.

Reed Bridgford, trainer, Rochester, Mich.—I don't see why we should give it away when we spent billions of dollars to develop it. It was our country that did the research on it. No reflection on Russia, but I don't see why we should give it to them or to any one else. It's like giving away an exclusive idea to a competitor.

Arthur Simmons, stable manager, 306 S. 72d st., Omaha, Neb.—Why should we give a secret of this kind to any one who may at some time in the future desire to use it against us? Persons and nations can experience a change of heart on a moment's notice—or without notice. Therefore, I think we should keep it.

William Simpson, writer, Mount Carroll, Ill.—If it were a secret I would say by all means keep it. But scientists say it can be easily developed by other countries. Germany was working on it and no doubt Russia almost had the formula completed. I think it would be very foolish to try to keep it secret.

Fred Parkinson, race horse trainer, Peoria, Ill.—I think that's something we should keep for ourselves. We might need it in the future for our own protection. I think we should keep it a secret for as long as possible while we work feverishly and secretly to find a defense against the atomic bomb.

John Scheckel, electrician, 2802 E. 87th—It is only a matter of time before the rest of the countries of the world discover the secret. We may as well tell Russia to save ourselves the embarrassment of showing mistrust for our allies. They will resent it if they are forced to spend billions to find out what we know.

YANKS STUFFED, STIFLED IN HOLD OF PRISON SHIP

(The transfer of American prisoners of war from Manila to Japan in the hold of a Japanese frater is described in this instalment of "Men Who Wouldn't Die," the stirring story of 40 months in Japanese prison camps, based on the diary of the author, a former Chicago advertising man.)

BY MAJ. A. C. TISDELLE
As told to Carl Wiegman
[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

We sailed from Manila in a Jap frater on July 25, 1943, a group of 500 bewildered, undernourished American prisoners of war, who didn't have the faintest idea where they were going or what they would do when they reached their destination.

Oddly enough Maj. Gen. Morimoto, the Jap commander at Manila, came down to the dock himself to wish us a safe and comfortable voyage. As I have said before, the Japs are a very polite people. But the general inspected our ship and quarters and he could see plainly that we were assigned to a cargo space below decks, about 30 by 40 feet in area, without any means of ventilation except the hatch above us.

We were in a hold of the ship that had been equipped with double deck platforms covered with grass mats. On these we put our blankets and there we slept and lived.

Meet Friendly Guard

A Japanese lieutenant in charge of our party issued life preservers to all except 15 men; there were not enough to go around. This made us apprehensive about a possible submarine attack, especially since the ship was not marked as a vessel carrying prisoners of war.

We were delighted to see among the guards a sergeant known to us as Big Speedo, who was well liked by all the prisoners. Back at Cabanatuan he had never been known to strike a prisoner and when he was around he permitted no enlisted men to beat us.

Our mental state as we sailed was one of pleasurable anticipation; not a man voiced any regrets at leaving the Philippines. We all felt that working conditions had been so bad they couldn't get worse and they might get better.

Food Is Encouraging

Our spirits had a letdown the first day. Instead of going to sea, the ship sailed up the coast to Santa Cruz and started loading manganese ore. We stayed there for three days, loading ore all the time until the ship hung low in the water.

This delay might have seemed irksome, but food was our main interest in life and the first food issued to us was mighty encouraging. It consisted of soft, fluffy rice cooked in a caldron heated by steam, vegetables, and 15 Chinese hams. There was not much fat on the hams, but when they were boiled in soup they provided a welcome relief from the usual vegetable soup. The food was prepared by our own cooks.

The ship put out to sea at 4 a. m. of the 29th, with all of us required to stay below decks except a maximum of 20 men who were permitted to be coming or going to the latrine. Regulating this procedure to the satisfaction of the Japs was a headache.

Nights of Misery

When we got out to sea the Japs permitted a maximum of 100 men to be on deck from 6 a. m. to 4 p. m., but at night they closed the hatch and the only ventilation came thru the little space at the top of a stairway to the deck. Soon the fetid air in the hold was suffocating. Moisture dripped from the dank bulkheads and sweat rolled off our bodies.

We endured this for two nights until we arrived at Takao, Formosa, on the morning of the 31st. There the officers of our party were interviewed by two English speaking Japanese newspaper reporters. One of them asked me who I thought would win the war. I replied promptly that the United States would win. He did not become angry, but peered at me with a puzzled expression and asked me why I thought so.

Reporters Couldn't Believe

"If you had ever traveled in the United States and had seen American industry, you would never need to ask that question," I responded.

The other officers gave similar replies, and the Jap reporters smiled at us pityingly as they told us good-by.

We stayed in port for five days while the ship took on an additional cargo of brooms and hardwood logs to be used for rifle

Judy Thompson holding Snafu in Louisville, Ky., yesterday.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 2 (AP)—Snafu, wire haired terrier puppy, finally reached his 3 year old mistress, Judy Thompson, today. Staff Sgt. Karl Rudolph bought Snafu in Munich, Germany, stuffed it in his battle jacket when boarding the boat home, and landed him safely in the United States. But the pup got lost in Trenton, N. J.

A friendly baggage master at Trenton, noting the identification tag on the dog's neck, expressed the pup to Louisville. After Snafu's arrival here he ran away. He was found today.

stocks. On the second day Pvt. Okonski was stricken with acute appendicitis. Our surgeon, Capt. Tom Hewlett of Louisville, Ky., operated on him on a table set up on deck, using a local anesthetic.

At the same time Pvt. Slagle came down with pneumonia. Our physician, Lt. Harold Proff of Minneapolis, moved him to a place by his side, tended him night and day, and pulled him thru.

Spurn Filipino Money

There were many food vendors on the dock, but we had nothing but Filipino money, which they would not accept. After much argument we persuaded our interpreter to change some of the money at a bank and to buy us 1,000 packages of cigarets and 53 cans of corned beef and cabbage. The corned beef was very strong with soya sauce, but it was good when mixed with rice.

The next day the interpreter bought for us 4,000 bananas and 249 pineapples, which were almost too good to be true.

Our ship left port at 8 a. m. Aug. 5, joining a nine ship convoy. That night the hatch was closed again and we almost smothered. Sixty-five men fainted. We had to carry them up the stairway and hold them in the air until they revived.

Attacked by Submarine

The interpreter was dead drunk and we couldn't persuade any of the other Japs to open the hatch. Several navy men among the prisoners rigged up a windsail on the deck to deflect air into the hold. This helped a little.

It rained most of the following day, which meant the Japs kept the hatch closed because they didn't want their precious manganese ore to get wet.

At nightfall we were attacked by a submarine, our biggest thrill since our war ended. We had feared a sub attack when the voyage began, but when it happened we were just glad—glad that our country was still in the war. Huddled down in the hold, we heard no explosion, but next morning there were only eight ships in the convoy. Seeing that also was a thrill.

During the remainder of the voyage the convoy was escorted by light attack bombers. On Sunday, Aug. 8, our interpreter recovered from his drunk and produced a 220 pound sack of salted peanuts, which he sold to us for 55 pesos [$27.50 at the pre-war rate of exchange].

Cook Beaten for Protest

One of our cooks, Ship's Storekeeper Gascoyne, who never was afraid to talk back to a Jap, got into an argument with a Jap cook about the amount of rice to be issued to the prisoners and was beaten on the head and shoulders with a shovel.

We protested to the interpreter, who gave a command, and a Jap noncom beat the daylights out of the offending Jap cook. We rubbed our eyes, uncomprehending, when we heard about this miraculous retribution.

During the whole voyage only three or four prisoners were slapped around by the guards. The food was good, and many guards gave us cigarets. We almost began to expect a welcoming delegation of geisha girls when we landed in Japan, which we now knew was our unwilling destination.

U. S. WILL TRY 42 FOR ATROCITIES AT DACHAU CAMP

WIESBADEN, Germany, Nov. 2 (AP)—Forty-one members of the Nazi SS corps [elite guard] and Dr. Klaus Karl Schilling, who conducted malarial experiments on internees, were charged today with violating the laws and usages of war in killing and torturing thousands at the Dachau concentration camp.

The army's judge advocate said the 42 probably would go on trial Nov. 15 before an eight man military court headed by Brig. Gen. John M. Lentz of the 3d army's 15th corps.

The charges state that between 1942 and 1945 the defendants subjected civilians of many nationalities, as well as members of the allied armed forces, to "killings, tortures, starvation, abuses, and indignities."

Altitude Tests

Chief defendants, in addition to Schilling, are Dr. Fritz Hintermeyer and Dr. Wilhelm Witteler, who are accused of conducting low and high altitude tests and cold water endurance tests on internees, many of whom died or lost their reason as a result.

Col. Leon Jaworski of Houston, Tex., chief of the 3d army's war criminal trial section, said all defendants had key positions in the camp or in the Landsberg subsidiary camp, where mostly Jews were mistreated and killed.

Woman Admits Beatings

LUENEBURG, Germany, Nov. 2 (AP)—Helena Kopper, 35 year old Polish woman, whose job was spying on concentration camp prisoners for the SS at Belsen, admitted in court today that she beat the inmates, but declared she "didn't cause them harm." She said she used a black oilcloth strap for the beatings.

YAMASHITA'S DEFENSE DENIED RECORD COPIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 2—The military trial commission sitting in judgment on Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, today refused the request of Col. Harry E. Clarke, defense battery chief, that he be supplied with 16 additional copies of the record of the arraignment hearing and the hearing on the first day of the trial.

The commission added it had no objection if the defense wished to take the matter up with the convening officer, presumably Lt. Gen. W. D. Styer, commanding general of the American forces, Western Pacific. The defense said it wished the documents "for use in contemplated proceedings before a civil court."

The defense said it would be very difficult for them to prepare for themselves the hundreds of pages of testimony and court procedure involved. Maj. Gen. R. B. Reynolds, trial commission president, gave no reason for the refusal of the request.

Ft. Sheridan Salvages Material Worth $33,000

Scrap materials valued at $33,000 were salvaged at Fort Sheridan during the first 10 months of 1945, Brig. Gen. John P. Pierce, commander, said yesterday. The material included corrugated paper, mixed paper, used egg cases, cooked grease, trapped grease, bones, kitchen waste, various metals, tin cans, and other surplus items.

HEAD OF JAPAN'S THOUGHT POLICE SENT TO PRISON

TOKYO, Nov. 2 (AP)—Genki Abe, former Japanese home minister who led in organizing the terroristic "thought" police, surrendered and was clapped into Omori prison today. Gen. MacArthur had ordered his arrest on war criminal charges.

Three suspected executioners of Doolittle flyers also were jailed today. In Omori prison was Lt. Gen. Shigeru Sawada, former deputy chief of the imperial general staff, who commanded the Shanghai area when three captured Doolittle flyers fell before a firing squad on Oct. 15, 1942.

Also placed in Omori for questioning was Lt. Yusei Wamitsu, son of the president of the Greater East Asia Independence society. The third suspect, a Maj. Hata, was in custody in the Tokyo military hospital with stomach ulcers.

CAIRO RIOTERS BURN AND LOOT JEWISH CENTERS

Arab World Calls Strike on 'Balfour Day'

ionable shopping street, kept iron shutters down over their windows and the street's traffic dwindled to a trickle, giving the district a holiday air, but there was no disorder.

Communications Halted

The general "Balfour day" strike itself halted all communications in Cairo, and delegates of five Arab associations presented notes of protest to all foreign diplomats.

"We beg to inform your country that all the Arab world is starting this day an active struggle against Zionists who will threaten the Arab world by their existence in Palestine," the note said.

The note demanded that the British disarm Jews in Palestine and halt immigration of Jews into the Holy Land.

Today's outbreaks were laid by some observers to the Arab league's local propaganda against Zionism and the support which the propaganda has had among students and movements like "Young Egypt," sometimes known as "The Green Shirts."

Still more influential in reaching and inflaming the populace is an organization still little known outside of Egypt and called the "Moslem Brotherhood," which now claims a million members and recruits its strength among Egypt's poverty stricken masses and appears to be the newest manifestation of Moslem fanaticism with sentimental Communist overtones.

Youths Seek Food

The members of these organizations supplied the emotional background for the riots and probably helped get some of them started, but they were soon swept aside by that immense mob of youths in ragged galabiehs [wrapper type garments] who fill Cairo's streets 24 hours every day.

They are not interested in Zionism or British imperialism and never heard of President Truman. Their one concern is to get more rags for their backs and something to eat.

In Palestine, where Balfour day coincided with an announcement that High Commissioner Gort had resigned because of his health, disturbances accompanied a nation-wide Arab general strike. Strikes also were staged in Syria and Lebanon. In London the British government thru Secretary of Colonies George Hall, served an ultimatum to terrorists in Palestine's Jewish community that unless there is a cessation of the "dastardly series of outrages" in the Holy Land, negotiations for settling the Jewish problem would be halted.

He referred to yesterday's organized attacks on Palestine's transportation system that cost five lives and wounded at least eight persons.

FEAR KIDNAPING AFTER HUNT FOR MISSING BOY, 3

Downieville, Cal., Nov. 2 (AP)—Members of the wealthy family of Dickie tum Suden, 3, who has been missing since yesterday from his mountain home, tonight expressed fear he had been kidnaped. The federal bureau of investigation, which previously had announced it was not investigating, tonight answered inquiries with "no comment."

Camp Beale soldiers joined civilians, sheriff's forces, and forest rangers searching the Sierra country for the boy. The only clews were the finding of one of the boy's mittens about one quarter mile from his home and the return of his dog, a constant companion, late yesterday.

The child's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph tum Suden of Goodyear's Bar. The father is a mine superintendent.

BRITAIN TURNS ARABS AGAINST JEWS: WAGNER

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—Arab opposition to the free immigration of Jews into Palestine is "largely the manipulation of British foreign and colonial officers," Sen. Wagner [D., N. Y.] said tonight.

In an address prepared for delivery before delegates of 29 nations attending the international Christian conference for Palestine, Wagner expressed grave fears for a "sound world order" if Britain "is not faithful to her promises" to the Jews in Palestine.

"As a member of the United States senate," he asserted, "I regard Palestine as a testing ground of British good faith."

BOGUS FBI AID INDICTED HERE IN CHECK FRAUD

Clarence W. Hulderman, 40, a fugitive from the Kentucky state reformatory at La Grange, was indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury on a charge of impersonating an agent of the federal bureau of investigation and cashing eight bogus checks totaling $1,320 in La Salle, La Salle county.

C. W. Hulderman

Raymond L. McClory, assistant United States attorney, said Hulderman admitted passing bogus checks in 12 states totaling $50,000. He was arrested two weeks ago in Columbus, O. McClory said Hulderman represented himself in La Salle as an FBI agent who had served with the Flying Tigers in China, as a commercial pilot, and as a major league baseball player.

Hulderman was sentenced to 10 years in Kentucky in 1944 for passing bogus checks. He escaped, was recaptured, then escaped again.

900 Vote to Continue Strike in Its 5th Week

Nine hundred members of the Automotive Workers' Industrial union [independent] last night voted at a meeting in Lawndale Masonic temple to continue their strike against the Diamond T Motor Car company, 4401 W. 26th st. The strike is in its fifth week. The men struck because the company allegedly refused to discharge 48 employes who had refused to pay a $1 assessment. The union charged that in this the company violated the union contract.

BRITISH REVEAL HOW JAVANESE SLEW BRIGADIER

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

SOERABAJA, Java, Oct. 31 [Delayed]—The British today told how Brigadier A. W. S. Mallaby was slain here yesterday during fighting with Indonesians.

Mallaby and three staff officers, Capt. Ronald Smith, Capt. T. L. Laughland, and Capt. Harold Shaw, and four Indonesian leaders were touring the city in a car in an attempt to end the shootings. The worst trouble was at the International Bank square where several hundred Indonesians, who had kept the building under gun fire for 48 hours, were being told by a few leaders to rush the building unless the 70 Indian soldiers inside it surrendered and turned over their guns.

The brigadier walked into the midst of the mob. His appearance cowed the leaders and they agreed to disband. The brigadier ordered the Indians to withdraw their weapons from sight and to remain quiet.

Car Stopped by Crowd

Then the brigadier returned to the car and all drove from the square. At a bridge over a river another crowd stopped the car. Mallaby and the four Indonesians attempted to quiet this group but it became more and more unruly. Aggravating the situation, the leaders at the bank again began to harangue the Indonesians. When the Indonesians with Mallaby left the car the crowd whisked one of them away and the others vanished. The brigadier and the captains then were stripped of their weapons.

The crowd demanded that the Indians in the bank surrender. The brigadier refused to give the order. As darkness neared he said he would tell the Indians to surrender and leave the building. The crowd dragged Capt. Shaw from the car and marched him back to the bank to deliver the order. "Maybe some of them can get out," the brigadier said to Laughland and Smith.

Shaw entered the bank. A few minutes later the Indonesians rushed the building. The Indians fired with everything they had, including mortars. At least 150 Indonesians dropped dead or wounded. The rest hurried for cover.

First Shots Miss

As the shooting started an Indonesian shoved his rifle into the car and fired four times. The brigadier and his two officers dropped to the floor uninjured. The crowd around the car scattered.

Bullets flew wildly. Darkness came but the battle raged on. After two hours the shooting ceased. Two Indonesians then ran up to the car and poked guns thru the window. The brigadier rose from his seat and told them to take him and the captains to the Indonesian officers. In reply the Indonesians fired and the brigadier fell back, dead. The shots set the fighting off anew at the bank and the brigadier's slayers ran for cover.

Again a lull came. The Indonesians again came to the car. But as they approached Laughland took a grenade from his pocket. He handed it to Smith, who pulled the pin and held the missile until the four second fuse had almost expired. Then he threw it. As it exploded the Indonesians outside fell dead or injured. Fragments splattered thru the car, injuring Laughland in the shoulder.

Officers Flee Car

During the confusion the two captains opened the door and dashed for the river. They plunged in and began swimming.

They hid in the water for a few minutes. Then they started down the river toward the docks two miles away where British troops were stationed. Midway, two fires which lighted up the river were burning. The captains waited three hours until the blazes died down. About 3 a. m. they reached the British outpost. Indian troops spotted them and fired, wounding Smith slightly in both arms before the officers could identify themselves.

BRITAIN'S PALESTINE CHIEF QUITS; CLASH ON POLICY HINTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

JERUSALEM, Nov. 2—Field Marshal Gort, high commissioner for Palestine and Transjordan, has offered his resignation "on grounds of ill health," an official British bulletin said today.

Field Marshal Gort

Because of the recent Arab-Jew disturbances, it is inevitable that the public does not exclude the possibility of a certain political background for the resignation, despite the fact that Gort's illness has long been known generally. Conjectures are that Gort disapproved of the London government's policy of postponement of a definite Palestine decision, foreseeing disturbances between the Jews and British, and therefore refusing responsibility for the crisis that may follow.

Rumors of Gort's resignation were circulating in Arab circles three weeks ago. Field Marshal Henry Maitland Wilson was then mentioned as his possible successor.

The Palestine Post, Jewish newspaper, said today:

"Unless there is a change of heart in London, or in both London and Washington, the alarming prospect must be faced that external factors that have frustrated constitutional measures and now threaten the existence of the Jew in the land promised him as a national home will be opposed by the people, who consider that a fight for their very lives has been forced on them."

While the Jewish population is in great tension, the Arabs are calm.

KENT ASKS WRIT TO MAKE BRITISH SET HIM FREE

BY GRAHAM MILLER

[By Wireless to the New York News and The Chicago Tribune]

LONDON, Nov. 2—Tyler Kent not only has instructed his attorney to invoke habeas corpus, one of the oldest laws on the British statute books, but has appealed to the American embassy to take up his case as that of an American citizen being detained in prison illegally, it was disclosed today.

For more than five years Kent, an American, has been held in English jails for violation of the British official secrets act while he was a code clerk in the American embassy here. Habeas corpus rests on the Magna Carta, a bill of rights forced from King John in 1215. Kent is invoking it on the ground that tho his prison sentence expired on Oct. 4 he's still being held.

Note to Embassy

In his appeal to the American embassy, written on prison notepaper, Kent said:

"I am writing to you to request the intervention of the American authorities in a matter which I consider involves an injustice to myself."

After relating that he is still in prison altho his sentence expired almost a month ago and mentioning that the nine months he spent in prison waiting for his appeal was not included in his sentence, he continued:

"I suggest that any further detention of me constitutes a gross injustice and is a matter in which I may properly request the intervention of the American authorities."

Kent is more than ever convinced, after having read pages torn from the Congressional Record dealing with his case, which his mother mailed to him, that he is being held here because the state department has brought pressure to bear on the British government.

Convicted Secretly

Kent was sentenced Oct. 28, 1940, on a secret conviction of larceny of an embassy document and of obtaining and communicating documents which might be of value to the enemy and prejudicial to the interests of the state.

It has been charged that in 1939 Winston Churchill, then first lord of the admiralty, exchanged coded messages with President Roosevelt which passed thru Kent's hands. In one, Churchill was alleged to have said, "Were I to become prime minister we could control the world." Others, concerned secret promises allegedly made by Mr. Roosevelt before Pearl Harbor that the United States would enter the war.

Kent says he wants to return to the United States as quickly as possible and that when he gets there he intends to tell the whole story of his arrest and imprisonment.

DUTCH, BRITISH FIGHT JAVANESE IN CAPITAL CITY

BATAVIA, Nov. 2 (AP)—New encounters with Indonesians broke out in Batavia today after heavy fighting at Magelang was halted under a temporary truce negotiated with the aid of President Soekarno of the "Indonesian republic."

Fighting in the capital began in Indonesian headquarters behind the Hotel Des Indes, and machine guns were fired for an hour before British forces restored order. Casualties on both sides were believed light, said the Dutch news agency Aneta.

RAF planes again strafed Indonesian forces battling British Indian troops in Magelang before the truce was achieved. The planes also dropped supplies to British forces at the naval base of Soerabaja, where a spokesman said the situation remained "very delicate."

Aneta quoted pilots returning from Soerabaja as saying they saw fighting in progress by the light of huge fires raging in the naval base city.

In Magelang, 180 miles southeast of Soerabaja, British and Indonesian representatives were conferring.

Last night one company of Gurkhas had been hard pressed in Magelang but the situation was restored after reënforcements arrived. The RAF planes enabled the Gurkhas to reoccupy a part of the town and reduce danger to the Magelang hospital, where many women and children had taken refuge.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—The senate confirmed Frederick J. Horne and Richard S. Edwards today as four star admirals.

LABOR PILES UP 2-1 MAJORITY IN BRITISH VOTING

LONDON, Nov. 2 (AP)—Labor's gains in Thursday's municipal elections, Britain's first since 1938, continued to pile up today and incomplete returns showed Socialists outdistancing the Conservatives, 2 to 1.

Even traditionally conservative Birmingham swung toward the left, but remained in control of the Conservatives, who have a preponderance of aldermanic strength.

Labor's successes were greatest in the provinces, where returns from 150 to 360 boroughs gave it a net gain of 950 council seats, while the Conservatives lost 473. The Liberals and Independents lost 129 and 340 seats, respectively.

In 20 of London's 28 boroughs, Laborites won 705 council seats against the Conservatives 229. In the 1938 elections, the Conservatives maintained an approximate 2 to 1 majority.

DOCK STRIKERS IN BRITAIN VOTE TRUCE OF 30 DAYS

LONDON, Nov. 2 (AP)—Thousands of striking dock workers, whose six weeks of idleness had paralyzed nearly all Britain's major ports, agreed today to return to work Monday under a 30 day truce to permit negotiation of their dispute over wages and welfare conditions.

Overwhelming votes to end the unauthorized strike by 43,000 men were registered at ports in Britain, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. But the strikers warned a nation-wide walkout would be called if the dispute is not settled within a month. They demand a basic pay of $5 a day.

TELLS HOW EVA SWAYED HITLER TO STAND AND DIE

Bravest Bunker Figure, Briton Reports

BERLIN, Germany, Nov. 2 [Reuters]—Eva Braun, Hitler's wife for less than a day, was the bravest figure in the bunker of the reichschancellery in the last days of Berlin, a British intelligence officer said today.

Giving further details of her and Hitler's suicides, he said Hitler was in a state of nervous prostration after deciding on April 22 to stay in the chancellery bunker to the end. Gen. Alfred Jodl and Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, German high command generals, regarded him as a coward for not going thru with a plan to retreat to Berchtesgaden to fight on.

Hitler accused every one except Eva Braun of letting him down. The officer quoted Prof. Albert Speer, former German minister, as saying, "Eva Braun was calm, the bravest and most intelligent person in the bunker. She persuaded Hitler to ignore the entreaties of his generals to fly south to the redoubt to continue the fight, and instead to stay and die in Berlin.

'Dying a Simple Matter'

"She seemed to look upon dying with Hitler as a simple matter."

After this Hitler strengthened his determination by saying, "A nation that does not fight for its capital has lost its soul."

"The evidence leaves no doubt that Hitler had the greatest respect for Eva Braun," the officer said, "and that her love had great significance for him.

"Whether or not she was ever truly his mistress nobody knows. She was a modest woman who could have exploited her relationship with Hitler during the 12 years she knew him, but she never did so. She was not a politician. She never tried seriously to influence him except in his decision to remain in Berlin. She seems to have been more his personal secretary than anything else. She was a good skier and mountain climber."

'Showpiece' of Final Days

The officer said evidence showed Eva Braun spent most of her time during the last days polishing her nails, combing her hair, changing from one costume to another and continuing to act as showpiece in the fuehrer's circle almost as if nothing was happening.

"She came to Berlin on April 15 from Munich against Hitler's wishes," he added. "She wanted to die with him and persuaded him to stay. There is no doubt they were legally married on the night before they died."

The officer said "there is no doubt that Hitler was a mystic and that there was a mystic element in his decision to stay.

Nazi Power Overestimated

"Thruout the last six months of the war he grossly overestimated the power of the German army and air force, and on April 21 he ordered a counter-attack that he actually thought would defeat the Russians. Actually, this attack could not have been made on more than a two or three battalion scale."

The officer said five mysteries remain: What became of the bodies? What became of Hitler's will, made on April 29? What became of Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy, after the tank on which he attempted to escape from Berlin exploded? What became of a chronicle written by Bormann of the last days in the chancellery bunker? What became of the body of Hitler's dog, Blondie, which was reported destroyed?

Witnesses said Bormann wrote continuously for days, recording minute details of the last days of Hitler and nazi Germany. His chronicle is believed buried somewhere in Berlin.

FRENCH BLOCK UNIFIED RULE, GEN. CLAY SAYS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 [Special]—Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, deputy to Gen. Eisenhower in Germany, who has returned to Washington for conferences on occupation policies, today said considerable progress is being made in working out four power rule in Germany but that the French attitude is blocking establishment of a unified system of administration.

Gen. Clay, who is deputy military governor of the American zone and United States representative on the coördinating committee for four power rule of Germany, said he will report to the war department on progress of the work of denazifying Germany in the American zone and of efforts to establish a central rule for the country.

"We want to be sure that our interpretations and thinking on policies in Germany is in accordance with the thinking in Washington," he said in an interview.

BRAIN NO CLEW AS TO HOW DUCE GOT THAT WAY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—Microscopic examination of tissue from Benito Mussolini's brain by army doctors in this country has given no clew as to how Il Duce got that way.

Col. J. E. Ash, director of the army medical museum, told a repoter today that two scraps from the forebrain of the fallen dictator have been received at the museum.

He said a study has disclosed no disease or structural abnormalities such as often account for personality traits.

Prepare for Race

The golden jubilee exhibit of the automobile, depicting the progress of automobile development during the last 50 years, opened yesterday in the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park. Cars and accessories manufactured during those years will be shown thru November in the museum.

A procession of the old cars between the Blackstone hotel and the museum yesterday aroused the interest of passing motorists. The old cars included a 1905 Oldsmobile, a 1907 Cadillac, a 1908 Ford, a 1909 Gleason, a 1911 Stoddard-Dayton, a 1912 Cadillac, and a 1913 Empire. These and about 50 other cars are part of the jubilee exhibit.

Six old cars, made between 1896 and 1910, will be raced between the museum and Evanston and back on Thanksgiving day, using the same route that was used in the first automobile race in this country in 1895. J. Frank Duryea of Madison, Conn., who won the race, will start in the race this year, driving a similar model, the Duryea, 1896.

2 ROBBERS SLUG, GAG WOMAN; GET $125 AND WATCH

Two well dressed men, each about 35, struck and tied up Mrs. Rose Sanders, 52, of 1127 Farwell av., in her apartment yesterday and stole $125, a $250 diamond platinum wrist watch, and several rings. Mrs. Sanders wriggled free of her bonds after they left and summoned help by screaming. She was taken to Edgewater hospital.

Mrs. Sanders, who manages the apartment building at her address, said the two asked for paper so they could leave a note for a tenant who was out. They followed Mrs. Sanders into her apartment and produced guns. When she denied having any money, one struck her head with a gun. She was gagged with a towel and her feet and hands were bound with neckties. The two ransacked the apartment. After they fled, she released herself and neighbors who heard her screams called police.

A Lady Loses Temper, but Court Is Lenient

Federal Judge William J. Campbell yesterday put Miss Barbara Lang, 69, of 2526 S. 60th ct., Cicero, on two years' probation for contempt of court. She was accused of throwing two dry batteries from her hearing aid at Referee Martin Ward in an altercation at a bankruptcy hearing Sept. 26. A charge of assaulting a federal officer was dismissed by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker on the recommendation of Assistant United States Atty. Hugo Sonnenschein Jr.

FRANCE DEMANDS GERMAN PLANES AND 500 TANKS

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 2—Following demands made for a share of the German fleet—submarines, destroyers, and light naval craft—France also demands large amounts of war equipment from the German army and air force.

A spokesman this evening explained that the government needs this material to fulfill its obligations to enforce peace under the united nations security league against possible aggressors.

"Until our industry is rebuilt and reorganized for the fabrication of war material we require an adequate amount of weapons to participate in any military sanctions necessary against a disturber of world peace," said the spokesman.

Want 500 Tanks

France asks the following:

Fifty fighter bombers, 350 transport planes, 2,800 training planes, 2,000 gliders, 5,000 or 6,000 motors, 3,000 tires, 250,000 automatic pistols, 500 tanks, 2,300 pieces of artillery, and an unspecified amount of ammunition.

"Most of the aviation and army material we want lies in the American zone, and under a directive from Washington the United States army of occupation is scheduled to start destroying this material Oct. 15," said the spokesman. "We asked Gen. Eisenhower for the material and he directed us to Washington, but we have received no reply yet.

Don't Ask Factories

"Since lend-lease has expired we are without foreign aid, and it seems unwarranted to destroy all this German war equipment which we so urgently require to force France to purchase identical items elsewhere or go without until our own industry is able to produce the material."

The spokesman denied the American objection that if France were given German weapons she then would insist that German munitions factories not be destroyed so that she could get spare parts and ammunition.

"We did not ask for the American factories which manufactured the material we received as lend-lease," he pointed out. "France is more desirous than any one else that Germany be disarmed industrially."

CHARGES DUCE'S MISTRESS WAS GERMANS' SPY

Italian Paper Tells of Double Dealing

BY P. E. BRIQUET
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CHIASSO, Switzerland, Nov. 2—Claretta Petacci, movie actress and Mussolini's mistress, who was executed with him, was a German spy. This accusation has been made in the Corriere Comasco, Italian weekly. Mussolini showed signs of tiring of her and she sold herself to the Germans in her battle to keep his affections, the weekly stated.

This is the story the Corriere Comasco told:

Both the Nazis and Italians of the arch-nazi neo-fascist setup surrounding Mussolini at Salo, Lake Garda, were divided in two camps. One was defeatist, the other vociferously loyal.

A Battle of Two Women

Mussolini's wife, Donna Rachele, bitterly opposed the main creator of the neo-fascist government, Guido Buffarini-Guidi, home minister. She gathered information that convinced the duce that Buffarini-Guidi's actions were detrimental to the state, and Mussolini dismissed him two months before the final crash.

Donna Rachele continued her eccentric ways with the German officials who, actually spying, went to her home, the Villa Veltrinelli. She received them without taking off her kitchen apron and while carrying feed to the chickens.

When Pietro Badoglio became premier of the Italian government the Germans placed Petacci near Mussolini for 45 days to keep an eye on him. Thus Petacci was at the Villa Fiordanisi, in Gardone, and later at Gabriele d'Annunzio's Villa Vittoriale, where she was watched by a handsome German officer who became her lover.

Few Chances to Meet

Petacci did not have many opportunities to meet Mussolini altho the Nazis and neo-Fascists did their best to bring them together.

Petacci bought information from servants in Mussolini's home and used his private telephone, which was provided by the Germans who were using Petacci as a spy.

The hatred between Donna Rachele and Petacci opened an irreparable break between Mussolini and his wife. Just before fleeing north on the trip that ended in his death, Mussolini telephoned his wife. A witness saw the duce hang up the receiver and hear him say, "Everything is finished with Rachele."

U. S. RECOGNIZES PROVISIONAL HUNGARY RULE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 [Special]—The United States accorded recognition to the Hungarian provisional government today thru an announcement by the state department that it would accept Kladar de Szegedy-Maszak, veteran foreign office official, as minister here. No American minister has yet been appointed to Budapest, and H. F. A. Schoenfeld is continuing as American representative there.

During the meeting of the council of foreign ministers in London the United States announced it would be prepared to grant recognition to Hungary if she gave suitable guarantees of free elections and the establishment of a democratic government. These have now been given, the state department said.

The United States action was regarded in diplomatic circles as another evidence of a progressive adjustment of differences with the Soviet union which holds a predominant interest in Hungary. It is considered significant that Budapest is sending a conservative here as minister instead of a radical who might be identified with circles in Hungary close to the Soviet union. The new minister, while chief of the political section in 1944 was arrested by the Germans and deported to Dachau, where he finally was liberated by American troops.

Wives to Join Yanks in Italy by Next Spring

ROME, Italy, Nov. 2—A plan whereby the wives and families of a number of United States officers and possibly enlisted men of the 88th division may join them here in the spring is under way and at least one officer already has been told he may expect his family in May, he said today. The 88th is on occupation duty in the provinces of Venezia Giulia and forms part of the British 13th corps. The wives will be billeted on the Lido at Venice.

GERMANS CAN'T GRASP SELF RULE, A.M.G. AID SAYS

He Seeks to Set Up Town Meeting

BY LARRY RUE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 2—Germans have no conception of democracy, Lt. Col. Raymond L. Hilles, head of the military government at Augsburg, said today.

Hilles, who rules 19 landkreieses [rural districts] and two stadtkreises [urban areas] with 50 officers and 20 enlisted men, told of the difficulties he encountered in carrying out the demobilization program.

10 Jobs, 10 Candidates

"We invited 3,000 workers at the Diesel plant to elect 10 shop stewards," he said. "A few days before we asked them how many candidates had been nominated. They replied, 'ten. We thought you said that was all we could elect, so that was all we nominated.' We had to ask them to nominate more and let the votes decide the results.

"We are trying to start Germany on the town meeting basis. From that stage we can enlarge the scope so that no longer will they be ruled from the top but will realize that in their hands they have the power to decide who represents them in every phase of the government. This is the best guarantee for peace I know."

Teachers Trained

Hilles said that because of the denazification policy there was only one teacher to every 97 pupils. "We cannot find others, so now we both organize special schools and train the teachers," he continued. "As a school teacher myself, I believe that teachers are the very essence of democracy."

Hilles formerly was superintendent of schools at Georgetown, Tex.

IKE'S ADVISER PUTS O. K. ON 5 CAMPS FOR JEWS

FRANKFURT, Germany, Nov. 2 (AP)—Judge Simon Rifkind, Gen. Eisenhower's new adviser on Jewish matters, reported today he found matters generally satisfactory in five displaced persons camps for Jews he had visited. Without mentioning specifically the report in which Earl G. Harrison told President Truman that the United States army was treating Jewish displaced persons little better than had the nazis, Judge Rifkind said:

"I found no barbed wire, no military guards, no restrictions on movements of residents. The only police I saw were appointed from among the displaced Jews themselves. Their health seemed good and they all reported they had gained weight. I heard no serious complaints about the quantity of food, but there were some complaints about the variety. Housing conditions range all the way from good to poor, with none scandalous."

He visited camps at Landsberg, Stuttgart, Feldafing, Fahrenwald, and St. Ottilien.

The dispatch says these suicide squads, which are gradually being rounded up by the Red army, are operating in the Funchun valley area.

Then and Now

A woman marine of 1945 yesterday met one of her sisters of 1916 in the office of Col. Chester Fordney, head of the marine recruiting service in Chicago, and saw what the marinettes of 29 years ago wore.

The 1916 marine was Edith Tyson Shepard of 720 Diversey pkwy., who appeared in her uniform. Its skirt dropped to within 10 inches of the floor. Uniform regulations of those days forbade carrying a handbag and required that pockets be empty.

The 1945 marine was Sgt. Rosemary B. Johnson of 6125 Kenwood av. Her natty green ensemble contrasted with the droopy World War I. model. Both women will attend the marine show Saturday night, Nov. 10, in Chicago Stadium in observance of the 170th birthday of the corps.

FRENCH TO TRAIN ARMY WOMEN AT FONTAINEBLEAU

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 2 — Capt. Jeanne Richard, attached to the ministry of war here, today outlined a project to make a permanent training center for active French WACs in the barracks in Fontainebleau where Napoleon's crack troops were drilled.

"Thousands of French women are eager to make the army their career," revealed Capt. Richard, who was among the first members of the resistance to escape to England and be transferred to Algiers, where she joined the patriots commanded by Maj. Helene Terre, now chief of the women's forces.

According to the written preferences of the volunteers, colonial service heads the list of the war jobs most French women choose.

TELL HOW TITO'S POLITICAL ARMY RUNS ELECTION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Nov. 1 [Delayed]—A Sofia, Bulgaria, report reaching Istanbul today said that nearly 15,000 Russian civilian agents have been sent into Yugoslavia to "supervise the elections" scheduled to be held on Nov. 11.

This report added that when these agents have finished their job in Yugoslavia they will be sent into Bulgaria for the same purpose. Bulgaria's election has been set for Nov. 18.

Two former Yugoslavian subjects who recently arrived in Istanbul said that Marshal Tito's "political army," which now numbers almost half a million, "is playing a leading part in the execution of Tito's orders for the elimination of the opposition." They said that leaders have been making speeches emphasizing that Tito has the "army's support."

Removes Chief of Staff

"These speeches," he said, "always are followed by a parade to intimidate the people. To be totally sure of his army Tito 10 days ago replaced his chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Arsa Jovahovitch. He named Kosta Popovitch, a simple civilian but a Communist of long standing, to the post and elevated him to lieutenant general.

"Tito's efforts are not aimed at getting votes, since, in reality, the success of his single list has been guaranteed thru measures taken inside the central Communist party.

Seeks to Convince Outsiders

"His only aim is to assure the presence of the voters at the polls to convince outsiders that the entire nation participated in the voting.

Measures to assure the presence of the electors have been taken only in the big cities and not in the small communities or regions where no foreigners live. The voters will only act the part. Few persons will dare not to show up at the elections as this not only would not change the already fixed results but would lead to pursuit by the OZNA, the Yugoslavian version of the Gestapo or G. P. U. [Russian secret police].

STUMP OF VETERAN'S ARM TRANSFORMED INTO TWO FINGERS

Vallejo, Cal., Nov. 2 (AP)—A surgical operation which converts the stump of a forearm into two large fingers is being used at Mare Island Naval hospital to rehabilitate men who lost their hands in combat.

The surgeon splits the arm lengthwise nearly to the elbow by severing the flesh between the two long bones. Some of the long muscle tissue is removed and the lesser muscles are rearranged, to give space between the separated members and to permit the skin to recover the surgical wounds.

The patient then has two outsize fingers which, unlike those of an artificial hand, retain the sense of touch and move under the stimulus of nerve impulses. Capt. Henry H. Kessler, navy surgeon, who has performed three such operations in the Pacific area, today permitted reporters to see his newest patient, Marine Sgt. Robert Moore, 28, of Richmond, Cal., who underwent the operation a month ago. Moore demonstrated that he could use the fingers like forceps, grasping and releasing objects and could feel them.

KOREAN LEADERS MEET TO REACH POLITICAL UNITY

SEOUL, Korea, Nov. 2 (AP)—A three hour conference today of more than 100 official and unofficial representatives of Korea's political parties resulted in a growing belief that there are many difficulties in the path of this long suppressed nation's bid for independence.

Dr. Syngman Rhee, former president of the Korean provisional government in exile, is working on a program to unify the various political parties and establish a provisional government that would be recognized by America.

A message Rhee drafted for presentation to the allies was presented to the conference but temporarily sidetracked for revision.

BRITISH JAIL 4 FOR AIDING FOE AS PRISONERS

LONDON, Nov. 2 [Reuters]—Four men—three air force air crew personnel and a London born lance corporal in the New Zealand expeditionary force—today were sentenced to varying terms of imprisonment for aiding the enemy while prisoners of war. A fifth, ex-Lt. Norman Baillie Stewart, was remanded until Nov. 20 on a charge of high treason.

The sentenced men were Pilot Officer D. R. M. Freeman [cashiered and ten years' imprisonment]; Warrant Officer R. D. Hughes [five years]; Flight Sgt. J. Alcock [two years' hard labor]. The lance corporal, R. N. Courlander, received 15 years' imprisonment.

Baillie Stewart was sentenced in April, 1933, to five years' imprisonment on charges relating to the collection and communication of information "likely to be useful to an enemy." In a statement read in court today regarding the present charge of high treason, Baillie Stewart was alleged to have said that he applied for German citizenship in 1938, but obtained it only in 1940 because "I had helped many Jews to leave Germany."

LEOPOLD DENIES HE AND HITLER WERE FRIENDLY

Premier Releases 'Text' of Leaders' Talk

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 2 (AP)—King Leopold today described as inaccurate a report declaring he was on cordial terms with Hitler at a meeting five years ago, and had thanked Hitler for "personal favors" including the return of Leopold's children from Spain.

The report, a 2,000 word document, released today by Premier Achille Van Acker, was an account prepared by Paul Schmidt, Hitler's interpreter at the Berchtesgaden meeting in November, 1940.

Leopold, in a letter released simultaneously by the government, charged that Schmidt attributed to him phrases uttered by Hitler and that "a sentence in which I am alleged to have spoken of an eventual collaboration between Belgium and Germany is entirely false."

Tells Purposes of Visit

Leopold denied he entered "into any political negotiations" with Hitler, or had made any promises to him. He said he went to Berchtesgaden only "to negotiate the release of our prisoners of war, to improve our food rations, and to lighten the economic and financial burden" imposed on Belgium.

Schmidt's report said the interview was "most cordial" and that Leopold had thanked Hitler "for all he had done for Belgium and expressed his gratitude for all the personal favors accorded him." Hitler, said Schmidt, expressed regret the interview should take place "under such circumstances."

The Schmidt document was captured by American troops, and turned over to Van Acker's government.

King in Switzerland

For months there has been a political battle over whether Leopold should be allowed to return to Belgium. Parliament has refused to permit his entry, and the king now is living in Switzerland.

Leopold's letter, addressed to Jacques Pirenne, his private secretary, said Schmidt was present at the interview to act only as interpreter because Leopold wished to speak in French. He said he had asked for a copy of Schmidt's translation after the interview, but this was refused. Leopold said the report was not a verbatim text and that former United States Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles once had remarked that notes attributed to Schmidt were not always accurate.

"I just tell my wife I'm at a meeting of air raid warden veterans."

GIVE ALLIED UNIT POWER TO BAN A-BOMBS: TAFT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—Sen. Taft [R., O.] suggested today that use of the atomic bomb might be outlawed successfully by giving the allied nations peace organization police power to see that no nation makes one.

James B. Conant

He said this might include provisions for inspections in all countries and an understanding that allied nations forces will "move in" if evidence of preparations to use atomic energy militarily is found.

Taft proposed the idea in an impromptu senate debate. Sen. Hatch [D., N. M.] started the discussion with a caution against reliance on a "paper" agreement to outlaw the bomb.

"Need More than Agreement"

"Any international agreement must be backed by something more than the paper on which it is written," Hatch said.

Hatch said he brought up the subject because yesterday Sen. McKellar [D., Tenn.] urged that the United States seek an international agreement not to use the bomb.

"You cannot outlaw it by simple agreement and I don't want the people of the world to think that the senate thinks that," Hatch said.

Meantime, President James B. Conant of Harvard university advised a joint senate military and commerce committee against banning on outlawing the bomb. The group is holding hearings on a bill to create a national science foundation.

"Poison Gas Effective"

Asked if an analogy could be drawn between existing agreements outlawing use of poison gas and suggestions that use of the bomb be banned, Conant said, "No." "Poison gas was not used in the last war, not because it was outlawed, but because it was not an effective weapon."

Conant estimated it might take Russia 5 to 15 years to catch up with the United States in the field of atomic energy, but he said that was "a guessing game."

During the war Conant was a member of the top policy commission of the government on the whole field of uranium, from which atomic energy may be released.

SHARE ATOMIC BOMB SECRETS! MOSCOW URGES

Predicts Disaster If U.S. Keeps Them

LONDON, Nov. 2 (AP)—An editorial read over the Moscow radio tonight said that unless the secret of the atomic bomb is shared by all nations, the consequences may be disastrous not only for oher countries but for America itself.

"This view is held by newspapers [in America] of the most diverse political trend," said the editorial from Moscow's New Times [formerly named War and the Working Classes].

Sees Arms Race

"Many American and British newspapers hold that any attempt to use this scientific achievement to terrorize other countries by the permanent threat of attack will only result in the biggest armament race in history," it said.

"The second World war has clearly demonstrated that only firm cooperation among peace loving nations can save the world from an unprecedented disaster," the paper added. The attempt of any country to achieve world domination with the aid of new weapons is doomed to failure.

"Will Discover Secrets"

"The attempt to refashion the world with the help of atomic diplomacy can lead to no good. Any production secret one country may possess is bound sooner or later to be discovered by another.

"Before many years other countries may be manufacturing bombs, perhaps tens, hundreds, or even thousands of times more powerful than those which caused such devastation in Japan."

NOW TEXAS MUST CALL CIOers BY ANOTHER NAME

Austin, Tex., Nov. 2 (AP)—The secretary of state today granted a charter to the Congress of Industrial Organization, an "educational" corporation, not the labor organization of similar name, and one of its incorporators, Phil Hopkins of San Antonio, announced the CIO labor group henceforth would be forbidden to use such name in Texas.

Hopkins also is vice chairman of Fight to Free Enterprise, an organization which has fought the CIO in Texas.

The charter for the newly organized Congress of Industrial Organization was granted after it had been determined the labor group does not have a charter. Only out of state "corporations organized for profit" are required to obtain permits to operate in Texas, the secretary of state's office said.

"The purposes for which the corporation is formed are to gather together as members or adherents, Texas industrial organizations of all categories, for educational purposes, embracing industrial conditions, statistics, and knowledge; for mutual betterment leading to central industrial improvement," the charter said. "The corporation is generally described as a benevolent and educational undertaking."

CALLS SINATRA TALK BOOST TO SCHOOL STRIKE

Frank Sinatra's speech Thursday blaming two Gary men for the strike of Froebel High school pupils because of transfers of Negroes to the school made the strikers more determined to continue their campaign, Leonard Levanda, 17, of 1005 W. 11th st., Gary, said yesterday. Levanda is the leader of the strike.

Reuben Olson, executive secretary of the Anselm forum, racial tolerance group that called Sinatra to Gary, denied that the crooner's appearance had cost $6,000.

"Sinatra was not ill-advised, but unadvised in making specific references to individuals in this community," Olson said.

Richard A. Nuzum, principal of Froebel, commented that Sinatra's speech had confused the issue and that the crooner "came to preach tolerance and became intolerant himself."

EXTRA SESSION URGED TO DEAL WITH HOUSING

A special legislative session to deal with Chicago's desperate housing shortage was asked of Gov. Green yesterday by Clarence W. Beatty Jr., federal government land condemnation specialist. Beatty, who became a student of housing thru acquiring sites for the federal projects in Chicago, was an assistant to Green when the governor was district attorney.

Beatty proposed that a special session be called for two purposes: To provide 5 million dollars for temporary housing of war veterans and to pass a law to permit "taking the use of vacant land in municipalities, not to exceed five years, for trailers, surplus war housing, and tourist cabin type housing."

"The big hurdle to jump before houses can be built is to acquire the land on which they are to rest," said Beatty in a letter to the governor. "If some housing is not provided within the next 60 days, it is probable that conditions of 1931 will be repeated, with World War II. veterans camping in fox holes under Wacker dr."

CLAIM BRUSHOFF, PLAN TO PICKET CAPITAL PARLEY

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 2 (AP)—Protesting that independent unions had been given the "brush-off" by not being asked to attend the labor-management peace conference opening Monday in Washington, Edward G. Wilms, chairman of the independent unions of New Jersey, said today the unions would establish picket lines around the Washington meeting place.

"John L. Lewis, Philip Murray, William Green, and other labor leaders will have to sneak in the back door or cross the picket line in order to be present at the conference," Wilms said in a statement.

"If President Truman and Mr. Schwellenbach [labor secretary] want labor harmony, it will be necessary for them to remember that working people not affiliated with the AFL or CIO must be represented at the conference."

WESTERN UNION EMPLOYES STOP WORK IN 4 CITIES

Stage Five Hour Protest Against WLB Ruling

New York, Nov. 2 (AP) — Western Union telegraph service to and from Philadelphia, Pa., Detroit, Mich., Hartford, Conn., and Providence, R. I., virtually ceased at noon [Chicago time] today as employes staged a five hour strike in protest against a war labor board ruling.

They returned to their posts at 5 p. m. A company spokesman said only a small number of messages accumulated during the stoppage.

Only urgent government messages and illness-death telegrams were handled in the cities involved, the Western Union reported.

Between 1,100 and 2,400 workers —according to varying company and union figures — left their jobs despite appeals by the AFL Commercial Telegraphers' union.

Wilmington Affected

Service to and from Wilmington, Del., was interrupted briefly because Western Union lines there clear thru Philadelphia. Normal service was restored shortly after the interruption, union spokesmen said.

A national work stoppage by 40,000 Western Union employes had been scheduled for today, but it was called off at the request of national officers of the telegrapher's union, who have filed notice of intent to take a strike vote.

The union said 1,200 workers had left their jobs in Philadelphia, 900 in Detroit, 175 in Hartford, and 125 in Providence. Western Union officials said the number out was 1,100.

The stoppage was in protest against a WLB ruling that granted a 4 cent an hour wage increase instead of the 15 or 16 cent boost the union had demanded.

HIGGINS OFFERS TO SELL

New Orleans, La., Nov. 2 (AP)—Andrew J. Higgins, who closed his three Higgins Industries, Inc., plants here yesterday during an AFL walkout, today proposed that the unions purchase the plants and operate them.

"All of the Higgins plants affected are owned by Higgins Industries, Inc., he said in an interview. "There is not one dime of government money in any of them."

The plants were closed on the fourth day of a walkout staged by 2,000 members of 33 AFL local unions, who said they were protesting refusal by Higgins to negotiate with the AFL over a new contract. The plants are at the industrial canal, City park, and Bayou St. John in New Orleans.

William L. Donnels, publicity chairman of the New Orleans AFL metal and building trades council, issued a union statement saying, "Higgins is a born dictator and never considers his workers. Right or wrong, his word is law. We hope he will reconsider his plan to close the plants."

MOUNTIES CALLED

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 2 (AP)—Royal Canadian mounted and Ontario provincial police were ordered here tonight after the first clash between local police and pickets at the plant of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, where 10,000 workers have been on strike since Sept. 7 in a pay dispute.

The skirmish occurred this afternoon when a squad of 15 policemen attempted unsuccessfully to batter an opening thru massed pickets, so that Ford guards could enter the plant. No one was injured.

RAISE CIO LUMBER PAY

Portland, Ore., Nov 2 (AP)—Hope for new houses brightened today as the nonstriking half of the northwest's lumber workers reached a settlement on wage demands.

The CIO International Wood Workers of America, who have kept the logs rolling during the 40 day AFL strike, accepted Big Fir operators' offer of a 12½ cents an hour increase—half the union demand.

The striking AFL union charged that "the CIO rank and file have been sold down the river by the low settlement." It said it would continue to fight for a $1.10 minimum. The settlement boosts the minimum of CIO workers from 90 cents to $1.02½.

19 TEXTILE MILLS CLOSED

Boston, Mass., Nov. 2 (AP)—Production in 19 New England textile mills was tied up tonight as 18,000 CIO workers continued their strike for closed shops, wage increases, and other concessions.

Eight textile mills employing 10,000 were affected in Maine; three employing 2,500 in Connecticut; two with 4,000 in New Hampshire, and six with 1,500 in Rhode Island. The strikers are members of the CIO Textile Workers' union.

3 CHRISTMASES ROLLED INTO ONE FOR SAILOR LAD

Christmas, 1943, in England. Christmas, 1944, aboard a merchant ship in mid-Atlantic. Christmas, 1945, probably in Japan. But Seaman Ben Granat Jr., 19, of 6711 N. St. Louis av., didn't regret the past or shrink from the future last night.

Seaman Granat was home on a 13 day leave and his family and friends were rolling three Christmases into one for him, with a gaily decorated tree, piles of gifts, pretty girls singing Christmas carols under the window, and everything else that goes with the holiday.

Thirty guests were on hand—relatives, friends, and neighbors, including four generations of kinfolk represented by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Siobera; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Granat Sr.; his sister, Mrs. Leonard Mann, and Mrs. Mann's son.

In fact, so many persons wanted to come to Ben's Christmas party that it had to be run in two sections to make room for everybody. The first section was Wednesday evening, but all the presents were saved to be opened last night. Monday Ben goes to Schumacher, Cal., for reassignment.

CITES M'ARTHUR IN ARGUING FOR MILITARY UNITY

Will Lose Next War Without It: Kenney

BY PHILIP DODD

(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2—The success of Gen. MacArthur's command of combined air, land, and sea operations against Japan proves the necessity for unified command in Washington, Gen. Kenney, commander of the far east air forces, told the senate military affairs committee today.

Gen. Kenney

Kenney gave the committee, which is holding hearings on bills for unification of the war and navy departments, a step by step description of MacArthur's campaign from the Solomons to Japan to show the part a separate air organization played in its success.

Kenney told the committee that enough forces never were available in the Southwest Pacific. As a consequence, he said, the blows that could be struck against the enemy were numbered and "each one had to count."

Calls It Unthinkable

Combined operations under a single command were necessary and any other type of organization than the one set up under MacArthur would have been "as unthinkable as it would have been unworkable," Kenney said.

"I cannot feel," the general said, "that a theater organization which works so admirably is not applicable to the basic structure in the United States. . . . I do not hold with those who maintain that interservice rivalry is responsible or is a necessary requisite for excellence in equipment and training of each.

"It would be as logical as trying to build a winning football team by fostering rivalry between the backs and the line."

First Line of Defense

Kenney was vigorous in his support of a separate air force with a unified department of national defense. He said air power is the nation's first line of defense because "strategy is now global and the airplane masters global distances." He continued:

"Any arbitrary assignment of air responsibilities over water areas to the navy, and over land areas to the army or the air arm, completely negates the experience gained in this war and the performance of aircraft to come."

Kenney said he visualized the next war starting with an air attack on the United States, and that we must be prepared to be the target for the first large scale offensive of any nation.

"It follows naturally that we must have unity of command at the head and heart of our military structure at home," he said. "But if there is another war and we enter it with our present weapons, we will lose it."

The general said that without unified control, we would start the next war with a period of reorganization, reorientation, "learning the hard way to effect joint, coördinate action."

"Gen. Marshall has stated," Kenney said, "that in many instances [during the war] there were delays and compromises in the joint chiefs of staff. If such delays resulted in prolonging the war just one day, what price can we put upon the lives just lost?"

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Nov. 3—Disband Washington's Army

THE American armies which had fought the Revolutionary war were officially disbanded Nov. 3, 1783, two months after the treaty of peace had been signed in Paris.

The proclamation of congress setting the date pointed out that "the glorious period is arrived when our national independence and sovereignty are established and we enjoy the prospect of a permanent and honorable peace."

Congress praised the record of the armies, declaring that they were "not less to be applauded for their fortitude and magnanimity in the most trying scenes of distress than for a series of heroic and illustrious achievements which exalt them to a high rank among the most zealous and successful defenders of the liberties of mankind."

The day preceding the official demobilization Gen. Washington had issued his last general orders in which he bade his soldiers "an affectionate, a long farewell."

The action of congress in proclaiming the disbandment of the armies merely made official what had already been accomplished.

Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown had taken place two years before, and all but a minute fraction of the estimated 250,000 men who had served at one time or another in the Revolutionary armies had returned to the pursuits of peace.

Sales of E bonds for the first three days of the Victory Loan drive in Chicago and Cook county totaled $5,029,000, or slightly more than 5 per cent of the $91,823,000 quota, George F. Spaulding, chairman of the city-county campaign, announced yesterday.

For the same period, sales of other categories of individual bonds reached $3,984,000, making a combined total of slightly more than $9,000,000, or 4.7 per cent of the total individual goal of $190,552,000, he said.

State-wide, E bond sales for the first three days totaled $7,320,000 or 5 per cent of the quota of $146,000,000, Renslow P. Sherer, chairman of the war finance committee of Illinois, reported. The Chicago and Cook county figures were included in the state figures. Sales of other type individual bonds totaled $6,594,000, or 4.9 per cent of the Illinois individual quota of $281,000,000. Combined sales thruout the state thus reached $13,914,000, or 4.9 per cent of the over-all quota of $756,000,000.

TRUMAN URGES 20% RAISE FOR U. S. EMPLOYES

Pay of Congress Would Be Doubled

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—The wage battle took new turns today, with the scrimmage spreading into the government itself. Here are the main points:

1. The White House threw its weight behind a proposal to boost federal civil service workers' salaries 20 per cent.

2. The CIO auto workers, seeking a 30 per cent wage raise, threatened court action to prevent any "unwarranted increases" in new car prices.

3. The nation's auto dealers denied they have demanded any profit increases from the OPA on new cars.

4. The national labor board announced it is referring back to the parties for further bargaining all issues in pending cases involving application of the government's new wage policy. The WLB said its action was designed to implement the government's policy favoring wage dispute settements by collective bargaining. There are about 1,000 wage dispute cases pending.

Supports Pay Increase

Arthur S. Flemming, civil service commissioner, said he was authorized to report that the 20 per cent raise for federal workers would be "in conformity with the program of the President."

The pay scales of government workers, he told the senate's civil service committee, which is considering a bill for a 20 per cent raise for federal civil service workers, are below the levels of private industry.

The indorsement for the 20 per cent raise was accompanied by a recommendation for a $10,000 a year raise for congressmen, federal judges, and top people in the administrative branch. For congressmen and most judges the $10,000 hike would be a 100 per cent increase, Flemming said.

Sen. Byrd [D., Va.] said at the senate committee session the 20 per cent increase for federal employes would "set standards for the entire country."

Auto Price Clash

Vice President Walter Reuther of the CIO auto workers told reporters his organization would go into court to prevent higher passenger car prices if the OPA should grant "unwarranted increases."

Reuther said his union had been denied a look at the cost and price figures given the OPA by auto makers as a basis for the new car price schedules which OPA Administrator Bowles is to announce.

Reuther said the union's contemplated court action would be filed under the price control act. That law, he said, provides for protests by any party dissatisfied with a price ruling. In case the OPA turned down the protest, Reuther said, the next step would be an appeal to the emergency court of appeals, which would have authority to issue an injunction against the price ruling.

Bowles said yesterday dealers are seeking the full margin of profit on a new car instead of being satisfied—as before the war—to take a loss on that margin thru used car tradeins.

The National Automobile Dealers association issued this statement in answer to Bowles' remarks:

"Administrator Bowles of the OPA has been quoted as charging that retail automobile dealers of the nation are demanding on new cars twice the profit margin they received on cars in 1939.

"The association, speaking for the 30,000 dealers of the country, emphatically denies this statement. At no time in their price discussions with the OPA during the last two years have they demanded any increase in profit.

"All they have asked is that their established trade discount not be disturbed until the OPA could prove by indisputable facts and figures that dealers can and should absorb increased new car production costs in whole or in part."

Truman Confers

New groups of industrial spokesmen and labor leaders conferred with the President today on the labor-management conference starting Monday.

As he left the White House, James Tanham, vice president of the Texas company and a conference delegate, told reporters that "collective bargaining doesn't get anywhere unless there is responsibility to carry out a contract after it is laid."

R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, said he would enter the conference with an "open mind."

"I'm hopeful something can be worked out," he said.

CONCILIATORS WEIGH U. S. INTERVENTION IN STORE STRIKES

The United States conciliation service prepared to move into the strike of nonselling employes of Marshall Field & Co. yesterday as picketing was extended to the Oak Park and Evanston stores. The union continued to picket the loop department store, annex, Merchandise Mart and Cable Piano company, a Field subsidiary.

Conflicting claims were made of the number of persons out in this strike, which began Thursday. Martin Heckmann, business agent of the union, claimed nearly 1,600 employes were out. Store officials said no more than 800 had left their jobs and that business within the store went on as usual.

BUS DRIVER'S AX ROUTS 2 POSING AS STRIKE AIDS

Union Disowns Pair in Downstate Flurry

An attempt to halt a De Luxe Trailways bus at Argenta, Macon county, by two men claiming to be supporters of striking Greyhound bus drivers early yesterday left one of the men in a roadside ditch with an ax wound in his head.

The driver of the bus, Melvin Siegengu of Chicago, reported later to Sheriff Emery Thornell of Macon county that the two men were in a sedan when they flagged down his bus at Argenta and asked if he did not know of the Greyhound bus strike.

Driver Wields Ax

When Siegengu replied that the Greyhound walkout did not affect drivers on his line, one of the men said, "You're hauling Greyhound passengers." Siegengu told the sheriff he then pulled an ax from the tools in his cab and hit one of the men, knocking him into the ditch. Siegengu then resumed his run to Chicago.

Officials of local 1200, Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, declared the two men had no connection with their union. Union activities, officials said, are confined to picketing the two bus stations in Chicago.

Union Claims Gains

Chicago union officials reported a spread of their strike to St. Louis, Mo., where they said a walkout affected service on Capital, Dixie, and Southwestern Greyhound lines.

While the strike stopped service in 19 states east of the Mississippi river, the United States conciliation service invited representatives of the companies and of the employes to meet in Washington Monday.

SERVICE TO U. S. ANNOUNCED BY DANISH AIR LINES

An air line route between Copenhagen, Denmark, and either New York or Chicago will be started within a few months, said Per Kampman, chairman of the Danish air lines, who was in Chicago yesterday en route to New York.

Accompanying Kampman was Prince Axel, cousin of the Danish king. The men have been attending the civil air conference at Montreal, Que., and recently visited aircraft factories in California.

Kampman said he had just purchased eight Douglas C-54 planes to use on the new route between Copenhagen and this country. The route will be established as soon as arrangements have been made with the state department, Kampman said.

FORT SHERIDAN CLEARS 42,849 YANKS IN MONTH

Discharges of army enlisted personnel from the Fort Sheridan separation center have reached a new peak of 1,500 a day, Brig. Gen. John P. Pierce, commander, announced yesterday. The October total of 42,849 set a new record, 20 per cent greater than the number in September, and triple that of August. Those discharged in October included 36,429 enlisted men, 4,916 officers, and 1,504 WACs. The average of more than 1,500 was attained in the last eight days of October. The busiest day ever experienced by the center was Oct. 31, when 1,617 discharges were made.

REPARATIONS

The reparations conference will convene shortly in Paris, but the major decisions have been made. Russia, occupying the eastern half of Germany, is already removing everything that can be carted away from her section and has been granted, in addition, a fourth interest in whatever is taken out of western Germany. There is a tacit agreement to allow France and Britain to share another 50 per cent of the western spoils, and the United States and all the lesser allies will divide what remains. As for this country, it has apparently waived any interest in machines and other movable objects in Germany and will seek to satisfy its half billion dollar claim by taking German property and bank balances in this country.

After the last war the effort was made to collect reparations in money. Some movable goods were taken, such as coal and the rolling stock of railroads, but the expectation of the allies was that they would recover their war costs and losses for the most part thru payments of cash. Germany for a while did succeed in transferring very substantial sums, but it soon became apparent that the money was coming in fact from America. American investors were extending large credits to Germany and the Germans were turning the money over to their creditors on reparations account. When we stopped making the loans the whole reparations apparatus blew up. The Germans didn't repay what they had borrowed from us and we were left holding the sack.

When that reparations plan was in preparation a good many economists, led by John M. Keynes, denounced it as unworkable and they were soon proved right. This time little is being heard of annual payments on reparation account and instead the emphasis is on collections in kind. Thus the same mistake is not being repeated; something, but not much, has been learned from experience.

The new plan, tho different, is worse. The excuse for it is that Germany must not be left with heavy industry with which she may rearm, but much more than heavy industry is being taken. In the long run the disruption of Germany's economy can hardly fail to disrupt the economy of all of Europe.

The short run consequences are already apparent. Gen. Eisenhower has reported increasing unrest in the population and he and other observers have attributed it largely to the lack of employment. The reparations program goes far to explain the present situation and as the program is carried along the difficulties will mount, requiring ever larger armies of occupation to prevent riot and revolution.

The plain fact is that it is impossible to collect in reparations the costs of a long and destructive war. It looks as if this lesson is once again going to be learned the hard way.

REDS IN THE THEATER

Frank Fay, the theatrical star, is a faithful communicant of the Roman Catholic church. When five other Broadway actors and actresses appeared as publicized participants in a communist front rally in Madison Square Garden, at which the Catholic church was attacked, Fay asked the Actors' Equity association, which is the theatrical trade union, to investigate.

If the participants of the rally were acting, not as individuals, but as representatives of Equity, in which Fay and other Roman Catholics have equal rights with themselves, Fay certainly was entitled to an investigation. He did not get it. Instead, the union's governing body convicted him of "censurable conduct," merely for asking for a determination of facts.

The principal result of the affair has been to draw wide public attention to the influence of Communists and their fellow travelers in Actors' Equity, an organization so strong in the theater that by merely expelling a member it can deny him his right to earn a living on the stage. The action against Fay was a public notice that any actor with the temerity to oppose or criticize the traitorous activity of American Communists can be denied his livelihood.

New York is headquarters for communism and the theater. A good many actors, who by the necessities of their craft are more often governed by emotion than intelligence, have been infected by the communist virus. Nevertheless, it is strange that actors, of all people, should subscribe to communism or support it in any way. They, more than any other profession, are dependent upon customers who can afford luxuries in the form of four or five or six dollar tickets. In working for communism actors are working for the system under which no one yet has had the necessities of life, let alone any money for luxuries.

Some of the actors, of course, may have been beguiled by stories of the state supported theater in Russia, in which the government foots the bill and the passes go to the party faithful. If any actor of talent thinks that he will improve his lot under such an arrangement he should be warned by the history of the federal theater which the taxpayers of this country financed under the WPA.

It is true that the taxpayers were footing the bill, but the performers didn't land their jobs on the basis of talent. Most of them got on the pay roll because they were faithful followers of the party line—at least the talent most of them exhibited didn't offer any other explanation of their presence there. Successful actors have nothing to look forward to in a communist dominated theater. The unsuccessful ones always have more time to connive with the burocrats who put out the money.

BRITISH JUSTICE

Tyler Kent, an American who was employed as a code clerk in our embassy in London, was convicted five years ago in a secret trial in a British court. He was charged with stealing a document from the embassy and communicating its contents to an enemy of England. At the time the United States was not at war.

Now Kent has served his term, but he still is held in prison. Two attempts to release him on habeas corpus writs brought no result. Apparently the most fundamental of all civil rights is a dead letter in England. The government there can keep a man locked up indefinitely when it has no warrant to do so. The victim, appealing to the courts for justice, finds them closed to him.

The British have boasted for centuries that despite their lack of a written constitution theirs is a free government. The fate of Tyler Kent, tried in secret and held in prison after he had served his term, mocks the boasters and the boast. It raises the question whether Britain is properly numbered among the civilized countries.

UNRRA AND A FREE PRESS

The house struck a blow for human decency when it added to the 550 million dollar appropriation to the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration the proviso that none of that money shall be spent in any country whose government interferes with the American press in reporting what is done with the appropriation. It is doubtful, however, whether the internationalists in the UNRRA organization will pay any attention to this proviso unless congress takes active steps to enforce it, by shutting off the funds at the first evidence of a violation.

The right of the American people to find out what is being done with their money is as much a protection to the peoples of liberated Europe as it is to the taxpayers of the United States. In times of unrest and famine the political faction that controls the food controls the country. The politicians of Europe know this well and they undertook to assure the maximum abuse of American charity when UNRRA was set up, thru the provision that food distribution shall be thru local authorities. Already there are reports that Marshal Tito, the soviet quisling in Yugoslavia, is diverting UNRRA supplies from the suffering people of that country to support his communist army.

Russia is relying on an iron censorship to prevent the rest of the world's knowing what it is doing to clamp its political control on central Europe. The censorship has become so outrageous that foreign correspondents in Moscow protested against it, only to receive the insulting reply from Commissar Molotov that their protest was not sound and that he did not "find it necessary to give it consideration."

If the UNRRA organization possessed courage, competence, or integrity, more could be expected of congress' free press provision. Unfortunately, it possesses none of these qualities. The people of the United States, if they knew how their funds were being used to bolster communist tyranny over the "liberated" peoples, would put an immediate stop to the expenditures. The New Dealers and the fellow travelers are doing their best to keep this news from them. They tried and failed to kill the free press amendment. They will keep on trying to blind the American people.

O, PARDON ME

As a senator and candidate for the Vice Presidency, Mr. Truman was frankly a machine politician, with a machine politician's loyalties. When he entered the White House his friends said that in his new office he would put such things behind him.

James Gavin was a gambler in Jeffersonville, Ind., the industrial town across the river from Louisville. He was caught cheating on his income tax, convicted in the federal court, and sentenced to five years in prison. Gavin is now out of jail after serving only 16 months of his sentence. He got out because the President, after once refusing, reconsidered his case and commuted his sentence to two years.

The United States parole board, whose members are Presidential appointees, promptly paroled him for the remainder of his sentence. The justice department says he got the parole because he was a first offender, had a good prison record, and because many prominent citizens in his community asserted that he was a good citizen. The department hasn't undertaken to explain why he got a commutation that made the parole possible, but the names of the prominent citizens clear up that mystery.

They included Sen. Barkley, the majority leader; Sen. Chandler, who has just resigned, and Emmet O'Neal, the Louisville congressman. All are Democrats. O'Neal attempts to deny that he worked for Gavin's pardon, but he confesses, "I may have called up Daniel M. Lyons, the justice department's pardon attorney, and asked that the matter be given careful consideration." That is Washington double talk. When O'Neal asked for "careful consideration" he might just as well have said, "Look, he's our pal. Do something for him."

Senators and congressmen don't pal around with professional gamblers because the gamblers are nice fellows and can get off a good story over a highball. They do favors for gamblers because gamblers habitually make substantial contributions to political machines and politicians in return for the privilege of breaking the law. Gavin was a creature of the Democratic machine in Kentucky. The machine took care of him. The commutation that the President gave him was a political favor to a group of the President's political supporters.

This Argentine thing is as tangled as the wrestling match in an old Ed Wynn show, wherein an adversary emerged from the heap wearing Ed's glasses. —Detroit News.

MR. PEPYS GADS ABOUT

3d Nov.—Had a high old time at last Saturday's football game, when the Wildcats overthrew the Purdoodlebugs, as I call them, to the annoyance of the numerous Hoosiers around this office. Not many citizens know that the doodlebug is a direct descendant of the ancient Egyptian scarabæus beetle, and that thus my title for the brisk young men from La Fayette, Ind., is honorary.

Went to the Art institute on the Sabbath, when I should have been ranging the forests to study nature's painting, and found the galleries overflowing with admirers of "what is it?" modernism. Around the picture of Dorian Gray [last state],. dense throngs stand in silent wonder. Fear I disturbed their raptures by saying audibly to myself: "I liked it better in technicolor."

Attended the first-night of "The Winter's Tale," a rare item by Mr. Shakespeare, and thought the play most pleasingly staged and acted. Am happy to see the classic drama coming to life, and believe that many people who know nothing of Shakespeare will rush to such performances as soon as they learn that they also contain words not spoken in polite society.

Then was invited out to dinner, and ate a roast duck which reflected great credit upon the Mississippi State College for Women, my hostess' alma mater. In that enlightened institution, a year of cooking is required for the A. B. degree. After this feast, decided to try to do a week's work.

COWBOY IN CHICAGO

The city moon looks pale and tired,
There's too much neon light;
My heart's a maverick lonesome for
A moon that's clean and bright
Above gray hills, low-rolling,
Where sagebrush shimmers white . . .
(Montana moon, Montana hills,
I miss you so, tonight!)

I can hear the cattle bawling
Deep and mournful in the yards;
Makes me wish that I was riding
Night-guard round 'em with my pards,
With the hills like gray cats sleeping,
And the sage all silver-white . . .
(Montana hills, Montana moon,
I miss you so, tonight.)

There's something 'bout those rolling hills . . .
My kid was in this war,
But it wasn't things like neon lights
He gave his lifeblood for!
Can't think of him but what I see
A big moon, clean and bright,
And unfenced hills. . . . (O, moon and hills,
I miss you so, tonight!) Monty.

You Do It This Way

About the time a youth gets over his yearning to become a Dick Tracy or a Flip Corkin, there sweeps over him a wild desire to become an advertising copywriter.

Always desirous of being helpful, we unselfishly offer the following sure-fire method of writing copy:

1. Select a famous character. Epictetus, Lydia Pinkham, or Fatty Arbuckle will do nicely.
2. Write a brief account of an incident in the life of the character selected.
3. Link up the incident with the merchandise to be advertised.

Example: "Rome was ablaze from Circus Maximus to the Pontine real estate development. Did this annoy Nero? It did not. He tossed his head, tuned up his trusty Cremona, and struck up, 'There'll be a hot time in the old town tonight.' The flames leaped higher, higher, higher! But Nero fiddled on. Don't fiddle away your time. Buy a Bouncer cigaret extinguisher today—right now! It puts 'em out. Save your home from the bonfire that was Rome. Don't be a Nero!" Hig

AMANUENSIS BLUES

O, I never mind dictation when the hour's after five,
And "bookkeep" I can right merrily
when feeling half alive.
Co-workers sporting Monday blues
just never get me down.
In fact, I reel out laughter when confronted with a frown.
But—
I shudder, cringe—I lapse into complete exasperation;
I chew my nails, I tear my locks
in just one situation,
And that's when I hear orders from a man (of some renown)
To please secure hotel space for his client out of town!

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if a stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

M. S. writes: "I have been discharged from service for nearly a year. Recently I was informed that the army has authorized a medal for every one who served in World War II., regardless of service outside the country. What is the color design of the new ribbon and where can I obtain the medal and ribbon?"

The victory medal for all persons who served in World War II. was authorized only recently and the design of the medal has not been announced. The ribbon will have a red center with white borders, flanked by double rainbows. The ribbon will not be available for another month and the method for applying for the medal will be announced later. All persons who served with honor between Dec. 7, 1941, and the end of hostilities in World War II. will be eligible for the victory medal. The date of termination of hostilities for the purpose of the medal award will be determined either by the President or congress. This will not necessarily be the date on which either the President or congress declares the war to be at end. World War I. victory medals were awarded for service between April 6, 1917, the date of declaration of war, and Nov. 11, 1918, the date the armistice became effective, except for those who served in Russia.

L. D. asks: "If a World War II. veteran joins the regular army in time of peace would his wife and child be eligible for pension in the event of his death?"

Yes, if the death was service connected. The payment is $38 for widow and $49 for widow and one child.

GRANULATED EYELIDS ON THE DECLINE

AMONG the contagious disorders of the eyes, trachoma is often listed as the most severe. The laity sometimes refers to the condition as "granulated eyelids" because of the irritating masses that appear on the conjunctiva, producing a sensation as if hundreds of foreign bodies had been blown in.

The malady is common in many countries including Russia, Poland, Hungary, Arabia, Japan, and China. It is so prevalent in Egypt that the term "Egyptian ophthalmia" is accepted as a synonym. In the United States its incidence was minimized greatly when the immigration service excluded victims. There are, however, certain localities where it exists in epidemic proportions. According to May, approximately 10 per cent of the entire Indian population is also affected.

Most physicians agree that the cause is a filtrable virus which is transmitted via contaminated fingers, towels, handkerchiefs, etc. Those living in crowded quarters and under poor hygienic conditions are favored.

The onset is usually slow and may resemble an ordinary infection in the eyes. In time the lids become thickened, swollen, and congested. Twitching, associated with itching and burning, may be present. Because of an increased flow of tears the eyes water. This secretion is highly infectious as it contains the causative organism. Many complain of pain on exposure to light; others experience visual disturbances. After several weeks granules begin to form on the inner membranes of the lids, giving the surface a raspberrylike appearance.

Occasionally the disease comes on suddenly with marked redness and a thick, heavy discharge. The whites of the eyes may look cloudy and grayish in color. The area is bloodshot owing to dilatation of blood vessels. Ulcers may complicate the picture. Untreated cases last many months to years and spontaneous cure follows, but not without the development of considerable scarring which can lead to permanent loss of vision.

In the past, treatment consisted of the application of irritating substances, of which the copper sulfate stick was the favorite. The granules were expressed by a roller which literally squeezed out the particles. Occasionally strips of involved tissue were removed especially in long standing cases.

The discovery of the sulfonamides revolutionized management. When these chemicals are taken by mouth and applied locally progress is startling. After three weeks of an intensive régime the amount of healing is comparable to three to six months of treatment by older methods. In addition scar formation is less likely to occur. Penicillin has been effective in some cases, especially when ulcers were present.

Victims should wash the eyes periodically with mild antiseptics. Every attempt to improve hygiene and surroundings, with cleanliness and proper ventilation, should be made. Good food and outdoor employment are important aids. The utmost care should be exercised in preventing contact with others.

That this disease is no longer the scourge that it once was is shown in one instance by the closing of a trachoma center in England. This building was set aside in the first half of the last century to treat affected children who were under the care of the poor law authorities.

JEEP DISEASE

M. H. writes: When and if it is possible, I intend to buy a jeep. Since reading your article on pilonidal cyst, I have been wondering if I should. I would use it only for city driving.

REPLY

An examination will disclose whether or not you have this type of cyst. If you do not, your only concern will be to keep from falling out. The chances are that you will not put the machine thru the paces that our service men did.

BACK FLOW

F. L. writes: Does regurgitate mean the same as vomit?

REPLY

Not quite. The return of gas or small bits of food from the stomach to the mouth is usually referred to as regurgitation rather than vomiting.

HEAT RAYS

L. S. writes: Does the infra-red lamp give the same rays as the sun?

REPLY

One of the rays that the sun gives off is the infra-red, but old Sol contains others, such as the ultraviolet.

MARIAN GLEASON

The Mechanical Russians

The penchant of the Russian soldiers for acquiring wristwatches and bicycles from American soldiers is well known, but a Chicago sergeant brought home a new variation. A Russian approached him one day and by a magnificent jumble of gestures and broken English finally conveyed the idea that he had seen some Americans riding bicycles with their hands off the handle bars. He wanted a bicycle like that, one with an "automatic steering device." The American, who possessed a bicycle, brightened immediately, jumped on it, rode it "no hands," and sold it for 10 times its normal price. C. O. D., too.

Horrors of Peace

The navy's PC-1081 is probably the only ship in the United States navy that ever had a collision with an automobile. A Milwaukee boy aboard her in Tokyo bay, Lt. [j. g.] R. N. Elvey, reports that the ship had been taken into some Tokyo docks and was just ready to pull out when a Jap came rambling along in an old DeSoto. The Jap apparently was carrying a heavy load of saki, for he drove right off the docks and into the side of the ship. For 20 minutes or so he and his car teetered on the edge of the deck, swaying with the ship it was ramming, until an army truck came and towed it inland. The ship now is considering painting a kamikaze automobile on the side of its bridge alongside its Hell Harvest insignia garnered at Okinawa.

Coming Events

World War III. probably is just around the corner. Abner Silver, the song writer, has written a book, soon to be out, called "All Women Are Wolves." He says it is not intended as a slur against all women, but refers only to the living.

The Home Front

One of the few institutional publications issued during the war to tell employes at war who at home is marrying whom and why not, which we shall miss when and if publication ceases, is Balabanner, published by Balaban & Katz, the movie outfit. It is edited by the unsung wit of Randolph st., J. R. Savage, whose caustic epigrams on home front hoopla during the bitter years of war have won his magazine a tremendous overseas audience. He now is back, very late with his first issue of peace, to do the same for reconversion. Do you mind, Mr. Savage, if we reprint you again? A few current witticisms:

"Sadie, the service center siren, says she has kissed so many sailors that her lips go in and out with the tide. . . . Hollywood producers—a body of nerves completely surrounded by relatives. . . . Salesmanship—1940, the customer was always right; 1944, the customer was always left; 1945, unless you make the customer right, you won't have a customer left. . . . On the air—when a thing isn't worth saying, it is sung. . . . The story of mankind—from Adam to atom. . . ."

Under the heading, Gullible's Travels, he gives a Randolph st. sharpshooter's resumé of current films, radio shows, and street scenes. A few thumbnail movie reviews: "Anchors Aweigh"—sighted Sinatra, sank same. "The Corn Is Green"—and not from envy! "The Dolly Sisters"—everybody wants to get into the act. "Where Do We Go from Here?"—out for a short beer. "Nob Hill"—tobogganing on a Raft. A few street scenes: United States Employment Office—long lines of department store queens wondering if their old jobs at the laundry are still open. Grant park—impatient loafers waiting for an excavation to watch. Bus terminals—war workers going back south to their grits—with gravy. Lincoln park—kids with books in their arms instead of sailors. Dance at Chicago service center—basic refresher.

Of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, he says merely, "Or all we got out of the Potsdam conference."

LIBERTY SHIPS AS TRANSPORTS

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, Oct. 26—Lt. Col. Davidson recently announced that Liberty ships can be converted into transports with only 50 man hours of work. Many high point men waiting transportation home have volunteered their services to help convert these ships. We have 2,700 Liberty ships in our armada, and what does the army do? They have bent over backwards and announced that a limited number will be prepared to take the men home. On top of that the high point men here in the disposition depots are doing the work on their own time. What's wrong with the other 2,650 Liberty ships? Unemployment is reported high in the States. Why not keep a few of these navy yard workers in their jobs and let them outfit these ships so that we can get home?

HOODLUMISM ON THE "L"

Chicago, Oct. 20—If you want to see a new low in high school student behavior, board a Douglas Park "L" in the loop some Friday night around 11:40 and observe the hoodlum antics of the Harrison High school students who are homeward bound from roller skating. They make a touchdown rush to get into the car, pushing and shoving each other and falling over the regular riders. When the car starts up they open most of the windows and the fun begins. A lot of them stand up on the seats and swing on the straps and apparently they are having one hell of a time. Last night they threw half-chewed apples at each other from one end of the car to the other. They throw empty quart milk bottles out of the windows, so if you happened to get hit by glass one Friday night while walking in the loop, you now know the source. This is a regular Friday shindig and these people [or whatever you wish to call them] get worse. If the "L" lines are unable to get protection, I would suggest they add a cattle car on this run for these kids.

THE LEND-LEASE WEAPONS

Chicago, Oct. 26—When lend-lease was first instituted President Roosevelt said that after the war equipment remaining in the hands of other nations would be returned to this country. Now it comes out that the Truman administration has requested that the only thing to be removed from these nations is the United States emblem.

The billions of dollars worth of guns and munitions we have distributed free all over this world will still kill liberty loving Javanese, Syrians, etc., emblem or no emblem. Let us get our boys home first, then gather up a few million tons of guns, bring them back, melt them down, and use the steel for farm equipment and building material.

A UNION FOR GI'S

Chicago, Oct. 26—While 11 million of our gallant boys served patriotically at $50 a month, a certain element of our young men, fit for service, escaped induction. They are now organizing with the CIO for the protection of their jobs, to the detriment of the GI's.

Why shouldn't the GI's organize into one great labor union and stop the CIO and the New Deal in its tracks?

MATH. F. MONDRY

WHERE'S THE OPA?

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 24—Why can't something be done about student housing conditions at the University of Illinois?

I am one of three co-eds living in a room, not over 12x15 feet, which contains one bed, three desks and chairs, three small bureaus, and one small closet. We are each paying $18 a month rent, making a total of $54 dollars a month for this one tiny room. Others in the same house are grouped by fours in rooms only slightly larger and with similar closet space for the same price. A total of $72 a month is paid for these four-girl rooms. These prices and conditions are typical of campus housing facilities.

Appeals to the university housing division and the local OPA office have proved futile, and the owner of this house refuses to talk to representatives of our group, which numbers 80.

NAVY ECONOMY

ENIWETOK, Oct. 13—A group of 167 of us in a ship repair unit were sent here two weeks after the war ended to a repair facility on one of these small islands to repair small landing craft. These battered hulks are not worth $50 and yet it is costing our government $10,000 a day to repair some and sink the others. In the name of good government, is this right?

Our first assignment after traveling 6,000 miles under trying conditions, was to make shelves, filing cabinets, and numerous other nonessential items for the convenience of our officers and ourselves. The question arises, what did we come out here for?

MOTTO FOR BARKLEY

Chicago, Oct. 30—The following lines from an ancient Greek tragedy would make a splendid motto for the Pearl Harbor investigating committee:

"And man's wisdom o'er hath been
To keep what is not good to see, unseen."

Euripides in "Hippolytus"

This could be chanted in unison by the members of the committee at the beginning of each session and it would look well on the flyleaf of the report to be released.

Chicago, Oct. 29—With the Victory loan just starting, and the so-called loans to Great Britain, Russia, and those other beggars being held up, it has occurred to me that the administration is stalling off these countries until the bond sales are over.

BATHTUB SAFE

Chicago, Nov. 1—[1] If a husband separates from his wife but they are not divorced, can he take the bathtub out of the house they own jointly? [2] Can a husband sell his half interest in property owned jointly with his wife?

L. F.

1. No, in the sense that if she appeals to a court other arrangements will be made.
2. As a practical matter, he could not get a reasonable price for the interest that he could convey.

A WILD AND WILY DEER GIVES CITY COPS BUCK AGUE

It's Still at Large After North Side Chase

Somewhere in the "wilds" of Chicago's north side, a wounded and terror stricken buck deer was roaming last night, after a day in which it eluded armed policemen in automobiles, unarmed schoolboys on bicycles, and half a dozen newspaper photographers.

The deer was first reported in the 4100 block of N. Albany av. shortly after 10 a. m. Albany Park police squads were speeding to the scene when, at 10:30, the deer leaped thru an 8x12 foot plate glass window of the M. & C. Motors showroom at 5129 N. Kedzie av.

Flees Thru Second Window

Bud Ronchetto, an employe of the company, heard the crash, and looked into the showroom in time to see the deer dash wildly to the opposite end of the room, leap thru another plate glass window, and escape.

Bloodstains on the showroom floor showed the animal had been injured severely, but it ran north in Kedzie av. and thru the prairie along the North Shore channel. At Bryn Mawr passers-by thought it was a runaway horse on the bridle path that parallels the channel.

Unwelcome at School

Nobody saw how the deer got across the channel, but at 10:45 it appeared at the Jamieson school, Mozart st. and Bryn Mawr av., while the pupils were on the playground at recess. Safety patrol boys said they rang the school bell to draw the children into the building, and then chased the deer for a while as it ran east in a prairie along Hollywood av.

The deer's next appearance was a mile to the northwest, where John Hill, 5910 N. Campbell av., saw it running north in the alley between Campbell and Artesian avs., just south of Peterson av.

No deer was reported missing from the Lincoln park or Brookfield zoos. Police theorized the animal may have escaped from a truck passing thru the city.

REFUSED TO AID POLICE, LOSES TAVERN LICENSE

Acting on recommendation of Police Commissioner Allman, Mayor Kelly yesterday revoked the tavern licenses of Samuel Krule who operated the Vestibule tavern at 2 E. Cermak rd. and George Pihos, owner of the tavern at 3301 Madison st. Allman reported to the mayor that the gun used in the holdup killing of Carl Dahlquist in the tavern he managed at 6 N. Clark st., a month ago, had been stored in Krule's place and that Krule had denied knowledge of the gun and had refused to coöperate with police. Pihos was accused by police of serving drinks to a young sailor and a girl, 15, whom the sailor raped after they left his place.

Permits 14 Per Cent Boost in Metal Christmas Toys

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—Metal toys will cost at least 14 per cent more this Christmas than in 1941. The OPA announced this today in reporting that manufacturers have been granted an increase in price ceilings. Manufacturers expect to produce approximately 25 per cent of their normal Christmas volume of metal toys.

WPB BIDS ADIEU, BUT PAY ROLLERS LINGER—ON PAY

The war production board will go out of existence today by Presidential order, but employes will be transferred to the civilian production administration, which will handle remaining reconversion problems. The regional office at 226 Jackson blvd. has notified all employes their jobs will be terminated Dec. 31. In Washington, D. C., Joseph D. Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, resigned yesterday as vice chairman of labor production for the WPB. He will return Monday to his CFL post.

DR. J. A. WILSON, ARCHEOLOGIST, WILL VISIT IRAQ

Dr. John A. Wilson, director of the Oriental institute at the University of Chicago, said yesterday he will leave in December for Hassuna, Iraq, and other near east areas to survey recent archeological discoveries. Hassuna is the site of excavations reported to have unearthed evidence that man was civilized 8,000 years ago, 2,000 years earlier than previous evidence of civilization. Dr. Wilson said he plans also to visit Egypt, Syria, and Palestine, to study work done since five years ago, when the university suspended its own archeological expeditions.

COURT REFUSES TO MAKE VOLPE A CITIZEN AGAIN

Anthony Volpe

Volpe, once listed as the city's public enemy No. 2, is under deportation orders and is at liberty on a $10,000 bond pending action by the federal government. In 1930 his deportation to Italy was protested by the Italian government.

In court yesterday Volpe sought to have Judge Schwartz vacate a previous order by the late Judge Joseph David of 1920 revoking citizenship he had granted to Volpe. Judge Schwartz held with Antonio Gassaway, assistant United States attorney, that his court lacked jurisdiction, because the matter is in federal hands.

"Volpe is a good, clean American," the one time gangster declaimed outside of court. "Immigration is a racket."

Reports Russia May Soon Be Able to Export Paper

MOSCOW, Nov. 2 (AP)—Production of paper in Russia, reduced about 50 per cent by the war, is increasing to such an extent that exportation may be possible soon. A. E. Izekov, an assistant commissar, said factories had already been restored in some Ukranian districts and that a Leningrad factory had been partly restored.

Truman Visits Minton in Walter Reed Hospital

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—President Truman visited a former senate colleague, Sherman Minton of Indiana, now a federal Circuit judge, in Walter Reed army hospital today. Hospital officials said Minton has been there since Sept. 29 for a medical survey.

"GREATEST FORD EVER BUILT"

Says Public from Coast to Coast!

"How Soon?" and "How Much?" Ask Throngs in Dealer Showrooms

On October 26 the new Fords for 1946 went on display in dealer showrooms the country over. In city after city, town after town, dealers reported that the crowds who came to view these fine new automobiles equalled those who greeted the introduction of the famous Ford model "A" back in 1927—when showroom attendance passed the 10,000,000 mark.

The opening day throngs were matched by those who came Saturday and later. And their opinion has been unanimous. The words most frequently heard have been "The Greatest Ford Ever Built." They backed up their acclaim with orders—326,840 on "V-8 Day", October 26—and Saturday, October 27.

This advertisement is published to record the deep gratification of the entire Ford organization at this spendid public reception . . . and to answer, as directly as we possibly can, the two questions most often asked.

"How Soon Can I Get My New Ford?" We sincerely believe the answer is "Sooner than you think!" and here's why—Ford, first with assembly line production of postwar cars, first to stock dealers for a nationwide display, is first in quantity production—1,000 units a day reached last week . . . 2,000 a day in prospect within 30 days.

"How Much Will My New Ford Cost?" We think the answer to this is found in Ford's unvarying policy through more than 40 years of operation: always the highest quality at the lowest possible cost.

TO THOSE WHO HAVE NOT YET SEEN THE NEW FORDS: All our dealers have them on display. Please make it a point to see if you, too, don't agree that these are the "Greatest Fords Ever Built."

"There's a Ford in Your Future"

THEATER OF AIR WILL PRESENT 'BITTER SWEET'

Marion Claire and Allan Jones, who first appeared together in "Bitter Sweet" at the St. Louis Municipal Opera a decade ago, will re-create their roles on the Chicago Theater of the Air broadcast of the Noel Coward operetta at 9 o'clock tonight over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. The operetta will be presented before 4,500 guests in the Medinah Temple auditorium.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, will speak.

Miss Claire will sing the dual role of Sarah Linden as a girl and of Lady Shayne, the Sarah of later life, who tells her tragic love story to a young friend. Jones will take the part of Carl Linden, her music teacher. Miss Claire and Mr. Jones also will enact the speaking roles. Bruce Foote will sing the part of Capt. August. Henry Weber will conduct the orchestra and chorus.

All the familiar Coward tunes—including "I'll See You Again," "Tokay," and "Zigeuner"—will be broadcast. Jack LaFrandre is the director.

Lane Technical High school will be saluted on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over W-G-N at 9:30 a. m. today. Principal James H. Smith will be host to the program which is conducted by the Chicago Tribune. John Frenster, senior class president, and Dorothy Reasoner, Goshen, Ind., will be named to the roll of honor. Amo Cappelli, pianist, will be the student star entertainer. The student body will sing three selections.

GETTING LAUGHS IS NO LAUGHING MATTER ON AIR

It Costs Big Programs $427 a Minute!

BY LARRY WOLTERS

Humor has become broadcasting's most expensive commodity. Joan Davis says: "I know a Hollywood playboy with a one track mind—Santa Anita!" Now whether you like it or not, that kind of gag comes higher than when George Shelton recalls a remark he says one horse made to another: "I don't remember your mane but your pace is familiar!"

It costs on the average $427.27 per minute to make you laugh—if you do—at the radio comedians. Talent for the 11 top comedy shows, as rated by the Hooper survey, costs $141,000 weekly. This doesn't include network time. The figures are based on a compilation of Billboard, show trade publication.

They include Jack Benny show, $22,500; Joan Davis, $18,000; Bob Hope, $15,000; Fibber and Molly, $10,500; Phil Baker, $4,500. Tom Howard and George Shelton, headliners of It Pays to Be Ignorant, are not among the first 11 comedy shows.

The current Hooper report shows Hope and Fibber tied for first place, with Jack Benny, Fred Allen, and Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy following in order.

The Radio Theater is in sixth place. Incidentally, the Radio Theater starting Monday, will have a new master of ceremonies. He is Col. William S. Keighley, a stage veteran and movie producer who spent three years in the army air forces.

The new regular chief was picked after numerous guest directors had been used since the resignation of Cecil B. DeMille last winter. DeMille left as a result of his dispute with the American Federation of Radio Artists, performers' union, over a special $1 assessment. Jimmy Stewart and Joan Blondell will star in "Destry Rides Again" on Monday.

A special Victory bond show will be broadcast from State and Adams sts. at 11 a. m. today. A United States army band will be heard. At 7:45 tonight WIND will present highlights of the bond show from Memorial stadium at Gary. Clifton Fadiman, the master of ceremonies of Information Please. Edna Ferber, the novelist; Carl Sandburg, poet and historian, and Bill Mauldin of war cartoon fame will be heard.

2 INDICTMENTS FOR RAPING OF WAVE QUASHED

Two rape indictments against William B. Starr, 21, of 809 Westmoreland av., Waukegan, were dismissed yesterday on motion of State's Atty. Harry A. Hall before Judge Ralph J. Dady in Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan.

The indictments resulted from the complaint of a WAVE stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Training center that Starr raped her three times near the naval station last Aug. 16 after the couple had visited several taverns. Starr was acquitted on a third rape indictment last Oct. 10.

Hall read into the record a letter from naval officials asking that further prosecution be dismissed because the WAVE had been transferred and would not be available to testify.

INSTALMENT XLVIII.

EXPLANATIONS

"Toby is a hero, too," Hester went on thru bites of her sandwich. "He was one of the first Commandos to land on the Normandy coast. He won all kinds of medals. That's where he lost his left arm. Heavens, Erica, don't look at me like that. Am I dropping a brick?"

"Aunt Hester, where did you hear all this?" Erica asked furiously.

"The Gordon Jones' nephew is visiting them. He was in Toby's regiment or battalion or whatever you call it. My dear, why hide it? You aren't ashamed of it, surely."

"Ashamed!" Erica was shrill. "But I promised not to tell. He loathes talking about it. He enlisted in his third year in college and went straight to killing people. But he can't talk about it. Promise you won't mention it."

"Well . . . of course."

Mr. Izenga glanced at Huntley, that charming handsome 4-F, and shivered. Huntley couldn't help it of course, but thank goodness, Erica had been spared him.

Mr. Izenga saw, too, that the method of killing Mrs. Pomeroy had instantly disqualified him. Throttling called for two live hands, agile and strong. Toby could have spoken up, but he didn't. He knew his silence would be a help to Lt. French and would help to trap the criminal.

Harry Duke was passing the sandwich tray again. Mr. Izenga asked him: "Why didn't you tell the police that Lucianna bumped into Ridge the night of the crime?"

Harry grunted. "Use your head, Izenga. What was I doing there myself? That's what the police would have wanted to know. So I kept my trap shut like a sensible guy. But Lucianna didn't. The fool. As if he'd stick at a second murder!"

Hester said softly: "Harry's told me about meeting Lucianna that night. He's told me everything. We're starting again. No runs, no hits, no errors."

And had Hester reciprocated? Mr. Izenga wasn't sure of that. He asked: "Was it you, Harry, who took the necklace from Lucianna's apartment after she was killed?"

"Yes. She's made a date with me for 8:15. I was a few minutes late. I went in and found her dead. So I took the necklace out of the safe and beat it."

"And you were following Harry, weren't you, Hester?" Mr. Izenga turned toward her.

"What if I was?" Hester bit into a little cake. "That wasn't a crime."

Erica had been staring fixedly at Harry Duke. He flushed but managed to avoid her eyes. Mr. Izenga recalled that the necklace had been slipped into Toby Newcomb's pocket in the dark. Had Harry done that?

"Huntley, you said you were with Uncle Ridge the night Lucianna was killed, and you said he hadn't left the apartment. Is that the truth?" Erica asked.

"I thought it was when I said it. I honestly did." He went on. "Of course I never dreamed Uncle Ridge could have killed Aunt Letty. But I've been thinking over our evening together. I remember now that about 8 o'clock he said he'd make some cocktails. I said I'd help, but he said they were to be a surprise. He wanted me to guess what was in them."

Mr. Izenga rolled his eyes despairingly. Poor stupid Huntley.

Huntley continued, "He went into the kitchen alone. He said it would take him quite a while. And he didn't come back with the cocktails till about 8:20."

"Did you hear Ridge in the kitchen all that time?" he asked.

"Well . . . no. You see the radio was on rather loud. There was a program he said he wanted me to hear. Naturally I never dreamed he'd left the place. And I don't know it now."

"What was in the cocktails?" Erica asked.

Huntley blinked at her. "Why . . . I don't know. We didn't discuss them at all. We talked about other things. I mean Uncle Ridge did. He's a very entertaining talker, you know."

Toby Newcomb came to the door of the sun room. He looked tired. Mr. Izenga looked at him with new eyes. Victory comes high.

"The lieutenant wants you in the library," Toby spoke to the Dukes. He glanced at Huntley. "You're next."

Huntley got to his feet. He said diffidently, "Erica, I think you should tell him . . ."

Mr. Izenga grasped Huntley's arm. He nodded toward the door. "Didn't you hear him, Huntley? You're wanted in the library."

Reluctantly Huntley followed the Dukes out of the room.

Mr. Izenga got to his feet.

"Don't go," Toby Newcomb said.

Mr. Izenga sat down from sheer amazement. He wouldn't have been surprised to hear it from Erica. But this was Toby.

Toby ate four sandwiches, two bites apiece. Then he turned pink.

"I'll never get on to this tea party stuff, Erica. Maybe Mr. Izenga is right. I'm not good enough for you."

"I've changed my mind," Mr. Izenga said.

Toby turned an angry face. "Why?"

"Darling!" Erica said.

"He's been hearing things," Toby snarled.

"Will you overlook my approving your marriage?" Mr. Izenga remarked acidly.

Toby glanced at Erica. Her face was pink and gay. She began to laugh and he joined in. Mr. Izenga smiled ironically.

"Have they taken Ridge away?" he asked.

Toby nodded. The laughter went out of Erica's face.

"Poor Gran. I wonder if she knew. I was sure she didn't really believe it was Toby the first time. She just took advantage of that note that brought Toby to her door at 3 a. m."

Toby said pensively, "You know, while I waited there I was positive I heard somebody tiptoe across her sitting room, push up the window and get out onto the porch roof. Just what she said she heard, too. But I knew every one would say I made it up. So I kept still. I knew Bill French would believe me."

"And somebody else," Erica said meekly.

"You don't count." He grinned at her. "You couldn't even remember the stone in my ring. I've got a good notion to jilt you. What do you think? They found keys to Ridge's pockets, and a gadget that slipped over a key to turn it from the other side of the door. That's how he got in and out the night he killed her."

Erica cringed. "Don't."

"It's not nice," Toby admitted. "Ridge thought he had a wonderful plan. He'd make the attack and get the victim to accuse me. Then when he really killed her the second night, I'd surely be stuck with the crime. He didn't know it was impossible." Toby reddened.

BODY OF INFANT FOUND ON GRAVE IN CEMETERY

The crushed body of a baby boy, apparently less than 24 hours old, was found in a woman's handbag on a grave in Mt. Olivet cemetery, 111th st. and Kedzie av., yesterday by cemetery attendants. Policeman Max Gornstein of the Bedford Park county highway police said the child was fully developed and apparently had been killed by the impact when hurled over the cemetery fence from Kedzie av. The condition of the body indicated the infant had been dead but a short time when found.

Mrs. Bradley to Be Wed to J. B. Shumway

BY JUDITH CASS

FROM Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herrick Hammond of Winnetka comes the announcement that their daughter, Mrs. Marion Hammond Bradley of Long Meadow Farm, and Lt. Comdr. John Brookfield Shumway of the naval reserve, son of Mrs. Philip R. Shumway of Evanston, will be married next Saturday. The ceremony will take place by candlelight at 5:30 p. m. in the Hammond home, with only the immediate families and a few close friends present. The Rev. Samuel D. Harkness of the Winnetka Congregational church will officiate, and Dr. Herbert Hyde of Winnetka will play the wedding march.

The bride will be unattended. The bridegroom will have as his best man his twin brother, Lt. Comdr. Peter Shumway, who will fly from Annapolis with his wife for the wedding. Coming from Washington will be the bridegroom's sister and her husband, Lt. and Mrs. Robert Elliott. Mrs. Hammond's son, Ensign Richard Stout, hopes to be here from Norman, Okla., and there is a possibility that the bride's cousin, Lt. Lyman Hammond, son of Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Hammond, will arrive from Burma in time to attend the wedding with his wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lang of Winnetka will entertain at dinner tonight for Mrs. Bradley and Comdr. Shumway, and Mr. and Mrs. James Martin will entertain at cocktails for them tomorrow. Comdr. Shumway is on terminal leave following five years of service. He and his bride will live at Long Meadow Farm, following a wedding trip to Bent Creek Ranch, Asheville, N. C.

On the Calendar

Anybody who enjoys guns, dogs, and the brisk autumn countryside will be able to indulge himself this week-end while the annual field trials of the English Springer Spaniel Field Trial Club of Illinois are in progress off Green Bay rd., southwest of route 176, near Lake Bluff. Spaniels from Oregon, Nebraska, and Michigan will compete against Illinois' own in four stake events.

The puppy, amateur open all-age, and shooting dog stakes will be run off today, beginning around 9 a. m. The official guns, competitors, officers of the club, which is headed by C. Benson Dushane Jr., and trial officials will meet for dinner tonight in the Deerpath Inn in Lake Forest. The most important stake, the open all-age, will occupy all of tomorrow.

Mrs. Movius Palmer will be one of the official guns. Conway Olmsted, now back in civilian clothes; the junior James Simpsons, and Charles Bishop of Portland, Ore., are some of those who have entered dogs. Dr. Charles Sabin of Portland and Claude Jasper of Madison, Wis., will be the judges.

Suburbanites who drop into the Barrington Methodist church between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. today to see Miss Katherine Waller's collection of international and historical dolls will be aiding a double cause —American Relief for France and Franco-American House, a community center located in the Chateau-Thierry district of France. Mrs. Corliss Anderson, who with Mrs. Malcolm McAdoo heads the recently formed French Relief committee of Barrington, was one of the American volunteers who served at the center at the end of World War I.

"Streamlining the Curriculum" will be the theme of the first fall dinner meeting of the Mount Holyoke Club of Chicago at 6:30 o'clock this evening in Huyler's restaurant, 308 S. Michigan av. Miss Mary Ashby Cheek, president of Rockford college, who is an alumna of Mount Holyoke and former dean of residence there, will lead the discussion.

Birth News

Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Kneedler [Pauline Perry] became the parents of a son, their fifth child, Wednesday in Sherman hospital, Elgin. The baby, a grandson of Mrs. I. Newton Perry, has been given family names, Donald Mason. Mr. Kneedler will return to the Philippines shortly to see about the family properties there. He and his wife and children luckily happened to be here on a visit from their Manila home when the war started. Before sailing back, however, Mr. Kneedler will establish his family in Berkeley, Cal. His father, Dr. Harry Kneedler, also of Manila, is in California now, and his wife will go west with the younger Kneedlers.

Wedding News

Miss Marjorie Elizabeth Clark, daughter of the Samuel H. Clarks of Winnetka, and Lt. Howard C. Warren of the marine corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Warren of Fleming, Colo., will be married at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Winnetka Congregational church, with a reception following in the Indian Hill club. Mrs. Albert Steinman of St. Louis will be Miss Clark's matron of honor. The maid of honor will be Miss Nancy Clark of Kansas City, Mo., and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. Philip Schaack, Mrs.

Muriel Kerr's Pianistic Skill Wins Acclaim

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

Seldom does a young artist make such a show of complete authority in a debut recital as did Muriel Kerr in Orchestra hall last night. Miss Kerr's performance quite definitely ranks her in the front line of young pianists, and it is arguable whether one should make any qualifications as to age.

The young New Yorker, her blonde beauty set off to fetching advantage in a scarlet velvet gown, accomplishes her feats by the most legitimate of methods. She is a satisfying rather than a sensational pianist, tho she lacks nothing in the way of complete command of her instrument. But these considerable resources of pianistic skill are put at the service of a musical nature that is invariably intelligent, tasteful, and sympathetic. And she has the rare power of making an audience feel that it is in communion with the music itself, rather than observing an exhibition of personal attainments.

One of Miss Kerr's most striking achievements was the final variation movement of Beethoven's Sonata, Opus 109, as lofty an expression as there is in all music, and set forth by the pianist with the mastery of true simplicity. Her versatility was immediately proved by a limpidly sensuous reading of Ravel's "Valses nobles and sentimentales" followed by two sparkling movements of the "Le Tombeau de Couperin" suite. This flair for contemporary music continued with attractive pieces by Fuleihan, Phillips, Schuman, and Shostakovich, and the recital ended with an exquisitely played Nocturne and Mazurka by Chopin, and a seething performance of Liszt's variations on Paganini's 24th Caprice.

The lowly saxophone was raised to the level of high art by Cecil Leeson in Kimball hall last night. Under his delicate touch the instrument no longer sobs and moans; it sings with the delicacy and tonal purity of a fine violin. Mr. Leeson is a pioneer, and to broaden the literature of his instrument he commissions young composers to write for it. Last night with the valuable assistance of Marion Hall at the piano he played a sonata by Sam Raphling, but tho it displayed Mr. Leeson's art in varied lights, it seemed a trivial and inexpert piece of music, scarcely worth the bother.

Thru the Looking Glass

Feel you're going to be foot happy now that shoe rationing is at an end? Being able to buy all the shoes you want will be awfully nice but better take some common sense along with your enthusiasm when you go shopping.

So much of foot health depends on the fit of our shoes that it's plain nonsense to buy those that suit whimsical tastes but pinch the toes or give inadequate support. Maybe you can afford to buy your dancing pumps for looks alone, altho it pays to be watchful even of them or you won't enjoy dancing very much. Show your feet lots of consideration, get shoes that are comfortable, and give them all the room they need. A too small shoe may look nice for the first few wearings and perhaps it won't become misshapen from the force of the foot, but it will make a difference in your looks and disposition, to say nothing of the harm done to the feet.

A shoe that's too large is equally as bad as one that's too small and you'll wind up with your tootsies red and sore from rubbing and muscles all cramped from trying to hold them on.

We wish there were some other word besides "sensible" to describe the kind of shoes needed by every woman who is on her feet for any length of time. Housewives and women who work should make it a point to have at least one good, solidly built pair of shoes that give good support and provide a firm foundation. They'll make you feel less tired at the end of a busy day and you'll whip about tasks with never a pang from aching feet.

'Common Grief Unites Mothers of Two Wars

Gold star mothers of two wars reached across the years separating them in age to share a common grief in attending a program given in their honor yesterday by the Cook county council of the American Legion auxiliary in the Grand Army of the Republic memorial hall.

The sentiment of the older women was expressed by Mrs. Mary Longshaw, 74, of 3030 S. Komensky av., who lost her son, John, in France. She said, looking at the younger women: "When our son died, they told us there would never be another war. I never thought I'd meet another group of gold star mothers here."

The council invited the 385 gold star mothers among the membership of its units. Nearly 200 attended, and leaders estimated that the total of 500 comprised the largest gold star attendance in the council's 25 years. The program is held in November, because Armistice day falls in this month.

The speaker was Joseph Cooke, commander of the American Legion post in Harvey, who warned that an appreciation of and respect for the rights of others was an underlying principle of peace which should be taught to children. He defined peace for America in terms of a strong country, physically, and a universal military training which will equip every boy to defend it.

The Constitution, he said, does not guarantee security, but rather the individual's opportunity to make his own security. People who want the government to take care of them will find their freedom lost under the very controls they've helped to set up, he added.

The youngest mother at the meeting was Mrs. Ada Smith, 42, of 4956 Ferdinand av. Her son, Lt. Frank Smith of the army air forces, was killed at Las Vegas, Nev., 16 months ago. He was 23. Some of the younger mothers, whose grief was newer and therefore keener, brought pictures, letters, and other mementoes of the sons they had lost. The older women were content with renewing friendships. One said: "I love this meeting, because some of the women who never come to any of the others do come here."

Ice and Horse Shows Attract Gala Crowds

The openings last night of the Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies in the Chicago Arena and of the second annual Chicago Horse show in the Coliseum attracted large crowds of Chicagoans in festive spirits. Dozens of dinner parties preceded both events.

A sum of around $19,000 will go into the coffers of the Service club as a result of the performance in the Arena, but the American Legion will not know for several days how much the horse show performances will net for its returning veterans' fund, as the show will continue thru next Sunday.

Service club members were jubilant over exceeding last year's Follies profits of nearly $18,000, and heaped congratulations and praise on the club's president, Mrs. E. Payson Smith, who has been at the organization's helm only a few months. Wearing a stunning new hat of glass flowers, pretty Mrs. Smith stood to watch the show, for every seat in the Arena had been sold.

Some of the hundreds who crowded thru the klieg lighted entrance were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mitchell, the John A. Morgans, the William Popes, the Thomas Smyths, the William A. Callisons, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson II., Mr. and Mrs. Scott J. Dow, Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. Charles F. Cutter, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Sims Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sims, Mrs. John K. Notz, Mrs. Rudolph Pabst, the Robert Cavanaughs, Mr. and Mrs. George Getz Jr., the Lawrence Moores, and the Frank G. Osbornes.

Both dinner clothes and informal ensembles shared the limelight at a dinner which the officers and directors of the Chicago Horse Show association gave in the Balinese room of the Blackstone hotel preceding the show in the Coliseum. Paul Butler, president of the show, in black tie, and Mrs. Butler in a hammered satin dinner gown of deep red, headed one table of guests in a corner of the crowded room. Seated with the Butlers were Mr. Butler's mother, Mrs. Frank O. Butler, in a gown of sophisticated black crepe and pearls; Miss Betty Babcock, in pale blue crepe bordered in silver sequins; Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, whose husband is in the hospital, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene T. Scott. Mr. Scott was wearing dinner clothes for one of the first times since his release from the naval air forces.

Looking very gay with a gardenia pinned in her upswept hairdo, Mrs. Louis B. Swift Jr. and Mr. Swift hurried thru dinner before dashing off to the flag decked Coliseum. The John F. Cuneos' guests included their son, John F. Cuneo Jr., and their daughter, Consuello, looking very grown up in black gown trimmed in black sequins; Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Kerwin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cummings, and Albert Cummings.

Among those who chose informal dress were Mrs. Theodore Mohlman, whose husband attended the dinner in riding attire; Mrs. Wallace Wakem, in black and royal blue, and Mrs. L. F. Caufield. Among the other diners who went on to their boxes at the show were Col. and Mrs. Leon Mandel, Mrs. David Peck, the Walter D. Monroes, and the J. Hampton Monroes.

Eat to Success, School Advises Business Girls

The way to a boss' heart is by proper eating. At least that's what they're saying these days in the Jones Commercial High school where they aim to turn out personalities as well as business personnel.

To prove their point that a secretary or a stenographer must follow a balanced diet to maintain efficiency, the faculty yesterday staged a demonstration entitled "Eat to Success." From the standpoint of the business girl who grabs a sandwich, a coke, and a cigaret for lunch, it might more appropriately be called "Eat to Excess."

Miss Ruth Gorman, health counselor of the school, however, assured all concerned that the model lunch on display, consisting of a bowl of hot soup, a meat sandwich, a vegetable salad, a glass of milk, a melon, and cookies were merely "adequate."

Indeed, a little Jones pupil plowed her way thru this business girl's banquet with the greatest of ease. She even looked around for more. According to the Jones formula, that little miss is going to be a howling success.

"The run-of-the-mill secretary or stenographer generally does not follow a diet adequate to maintain the brisk pace of the modern business office," Miss Gorman said.

"A cigaret is no substitute for health-giving food. If the American business girl is to develop beyond the borderline anemia stage into a healthy, vital creature radiating personality, she must have a proper lunch."

The efficient career girl must eat three well balanced meals a day, Miss Gorman insisted. The working girl should consume a pint of milk a day, four eggs a week, some dairy products such as cheese or butter at every meal, two green leafy vegetables, two servings of meat, and one fresh fruit daily. . . . A mere matter of some 2,200 calories.

A cigaret at lunch time curbs the appetite and is especially ill advised for typists who can't afford to be jittery at work, Miss Gorman contended. It's a nasty weed in a flowering business career.

Whimsy Filled Kandinsky Art Goes on View

BY ELEANOR JEWETT

The first exhibition of the new season opened yesterday in the Arts Club galleries. It is an exciting and amusing affair filled with swirling color, a memorial exhibition of the works of Wassily Kandinsky, the Russian painter. The paintings are lent by the Museum of Non-objective Painting of New York City.

"Nonobjective" is as good a way as any in which to describe in a nutshell the essence of Kandinsky's efforts. There are titles, but it is far less difficult to digest the pictures as to arrangements in line and color than to trace in them a definite relationship with their ostensible subject. The only way to enjoy the show is to let yourself float as nimbly, if that is possible, as the painter did in creating his whimsies.

Floating thru Kandinsky's world, you will feel yourself accompanied by the characters from nonsense verse and tale and from the shadows where bloodless spectres stalk. His is a world of dream and fantasy, where balloon and kite, bone and ship, tree and wave become otherwise and suggest themselves thru a mere hint. It is a world of fantastic color, sometimes cold, sometimes passionately hot.

Once, long ago, in 1909, Kandinsky thought in sober fashion and produced "Crinolines," recognizable and charming, a period piece that is still affecting. Again in "Troika" he allowed the meaning of his composition to shine thru. For the rest, his delight was a whirl of thought and idea, a gloating over the sumptuous or ascetic quality of paint and a pouring out of dream states that satisfy emotion but stymie intelligence.

We can think of no greater waste of time than that spent in understanding Kandinsky. He is to be enjoyed, like a freshet in the spring. He carries amazing items in his comet's tail. Those who feel the urge of nonobjective creation, those in whom it rings a bell, will revel in this comprehensive exhibit.

Poets Club to Mark the 80th Birthday of Its Founder Tonight

The Poets club of Chicago will celebrate the 80th birthday anniversary of its founder and former president, John E. Groves, at a dinner tonight in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mr. Groves, an attorney by profession and poet by avocation, organized the group in 1921. Five years later affiliation with the Poetry Society of London was established. The special program planned for the party will include songs by Maud Nosler, soprano, and a "modelogue," demonstration with commentary on portraiture and sculpture by the Chicago artist, Helen Adele Lerch Miller. Several members will read original verse to musical settings composed and played by Elizabeth Campbell.

Contrasts

Oct. 27, 5:30 p. m.—Homegoing: Shafts of sunlight illuminating the brilliant cloudless blue overhead as I hurry for my bus in order to make the 5:50 train. . . . Skyscrapers clearly outlined against the sky. . . . Buses marching down Michigan av. in their bright yellow coats. . . . The murky water of the river below the bridge. . . . Shop windows blazoning new fall costumes in all their brilliant colors.

Oct. 29, 5:30 p. m.—Homegoing: Twinkling of a thousand lights against the inky black sky like fireflies on a warm summer evening. . . . Buses crawling along at a snail's pace. . . . A horn honking in the distance, insistent as a child begging for a piece of candy. . . . Pedestrians obscured in the darkness. . . . The dazzling red of the sign atop the Union station as I rush down the incline, out the gate to my train which is puffing and coughing ready for departure.

A Pleasing Thought

Hobby

Love is a universal hobby. It beggars description. This often goes double for the chap involved in the transaction.

Love is a condition of the mind when the mind is out of condition. The cure depends on a preacher instead of a physician, which probably is why he is called a doctor of divinity.

Love causes people to do a host of unaccountable things amongst which is [you guessed it] matrimony.

Courtship is just one tight squeeze after another. The last one you can't quite squeeze out of.

Cupid is a little guy who got rolled of his rompers. He isn't sure who did it, so he goes around sticking arrows into any one he sees.

Women in love are more illogical than men. A man will fall in love with a pretty face, but what excuse can a woman have?

If you are in love with some one, a kiss is the best way to tell it to her face. JOSEPH H. GRAY

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 2—It's all set. Irene Dunne will play "Anna" in the "King of Siam." She canceled it a month ago because of her husband's illness. Now Dr. Frank Griffin soon will be able to leave the hospital for home where their library is being made into a bedroom. He and his doctor have advised her to go on with her career, so she'll play "Anna." . . . They're certainly rolling up a star cast for "Till the Clouds Roll By." Lena Horne and Grace Hanneford [daughter Poodles] have been added. Grace will ride her own white pony in a circus sequence. I'm glad, too, that Jacqueline White is in it. She got off to a bad start with Metro thru no fault of her own, when she was cut out of "The Yearling." . . . Charley Vidor's wedding present to his wife, Doris Leroy, was a 1946 convertible car. . . . One dollar will get you 10 at Warners that Faye Emerson Roosevelt is expecting. . . . The OPA insisted Lillian Gish sue her landlady for overcharging her $500 a month for a five room bungalow. And it will be Dorothy—not Lillian—who will play opposite Louis Calhern in "The Magnificent Yankee." Lillian couldn't handle that assignment. . . . John Hoyt [shortened from Hoysradt], waiting for a part at Paramount, is working on a play for Brock Pemberton. . . . You'd know Spike Jones would get around to his own arrangement of "Holiday for Strings." He'll do it in "Manhattan at Midnight."

It's Not "Mickey" Mouse

Before our next big premiere at the Carthay theater, they'd better do something about the mice. The usherettes assured me they were harmless; that all they have to do is turn their flashlights on them and they scamper for home. But a good husky scream won't add dollars to the boxoffice. Of course a scream wouldn't have hurt the premiere of "Spellbound," 'cause we all wanted to do that after the picture got into stride with Ingrid Bergman, Gregory Peck, and this year's Barry Fitzgerald, Michael Chekhov. It's one of Alfred Hitchcock's best thrillerdillers. The music used as counterplot was excellent. I kept remembering snatches of it, then realized they'd used the same idea in "Lost Week-End." Both scores were written by the same man. Going back to Chekhov, he's the son of the famous Russian author. He opened a school of acting in Connecticut and among his pupils were Hurd Hatfield and Iris Tree. He sure has come into his own in "Spellbound."

Hubba, Hubba, Hubba, Hubba.

The most frightening hob-gobble Halloween night was Peter Lorre. He not only scared children and his neighbors but later on his friends at the Mocambo. That place was jumping with jive—Lana Turner really looking like a movie star; "Pocket Venus" Diana Powell twirling with Hoagy Carmichael, whose back hair would make five spare mustaches for Jerry Colonna; Ken Murray lolly-gaggin' over a pretty girl. [Just learned the reason for his divorce, and it threw me! Haven't recovered yet.] Dorothy Mackaill was being welcomed back after eight years. Clark Gable was buying champagne for Dolly O'Brien, who takes off for the home base, Palm Beach, Fla., any minute. The Donald Nelsons had themselves a time. The red plumes were so thick you couldn't see the forest for the trees on Dora Morrison's hat. Soldiers and sailors were getting their short snorters signed. Phil Ohman asked Jimmy McHugh to play the piano, but the crowd was so dense he couldn't reach it. Gary Cooper's mother was in the lobby selling tickets to a benefit and wondering when we're going to see Tom Breneman's "Breakfast in Hollywood."

While the smaller cuts of veal are similar in appearance to those of beef, they differ in size and method of preparation. The smaller cuts of veal are from ⅓ to ½ the size of beef cuts and are cooked by moist heat methods because of their excessive amount of connective tissue.

Braising is the ideal method of preparing veal steaks, cutlets, and chops. To braise, heat heavy frying pan and add a little fat. Dredge steak with flour which has been well seasoned, brown on both sides. Add a small amount of water, enough to create steam, and cook, covered, at a lowered temperature, until the meat is tender.

Veal chops take to breading. To bread, season with salt and pepper, dip in flour, beaten egg, and then in fine cracker crumbs. Brown the chops in hot lard until golden brown, then reduce heat, cover, and cook until tender. To keep the coating of breaded chops from falling off, place chops in the refrigerator before cooking. For best results, transfer chops to another cooking utensil after browning them in deep fat.

Veal cutlets are from the leg of veal and correspond to beef round steaks. However, unlike beef steaks, they are best when braised. Or have them French fried for a change.

French Fried Veal Cutlets

1½ pounds veal cutlets
Dry bread crumbs, finely rolled
¼ cup milk
1 egg, well beaten
Salt and pepper

Have the meat cut ½ inch thick. Pound it quite thin and cut in pieces for serving. Roll in bread crumbs, then dip in beaten egg and milk mixed together. Season and dip in crumbs a second time. Fry in deep hot fat [350 degrees] until well browned. Drain on absorbent paper and serve hot with a sprinkling of finely minced parsley.

To remedy the lack of fat in veal, serve veal chops which have been cooked with sour cream:

Paprika Schnitzel

6 veal chops, ½ inch thick
Salt, pepper, flour
2 medium onions, sliced
3 tablespoons lard
Paprika
½ cup thick sour cream

Dredge the chops in flour and seasonings. Heat fat in skillet, add enough paprika to give a good red color, and the sliced onion. Brown slightly, add the meat, brown, and gradually add the sour cream. Cover the pan and let cook slowly about a half an hour, or until tender.

When you're thinking of veal for dinner and are low on red points, don't forget mock chicken legs. Most butchers have them. They consist of ground veal breast which has been shaped and placed on a skewer to resemble drumsticks. Roll them in flour seasoned with salt and pepper, and brown all around in a small amount of hot fat. Turn them carefully so that the pieces will keep their shape. When browned, add a little hot water, cover the pan closely, and turn down the heat. Let cook very slowly for half an hour, or place them in a 325 degree oven until done. For a festive air, put a paper frill on the bare end of the skewer when the chicken legs are served.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

Raised Doughnuts
[Makes two dozen]

2 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup boiling water
½ cup evaporated milk
½ cake compressed yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 egg, well beaten
3¾ cup flour

Combine shortening, sugar, salt, boiling water, and milk. When lukewarm, add yeast dissolved in water, and egg. Stir in 2 cups of flour and beat well. Add remaining flour, or enough to make a dough which can be handled. Knead well, place in a greased bowl, and cover tightly with wax paper. Store in refrigerator overnight. Roll out ¼ inch thick and cut with a doughnut cutter or small biscuit cutter. If biscuit cutter is used, stretch dough and press center down. Do not let dough rise before frying. If desired, dough may be fried immediately without storing overnight. Fry in deep fat, 360 to 370 degrees, from 2 to 3 minutes, or until lightly browned. If biscuit cutter is used, fill resulting hollow with chopped cooked prunes or apricots. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Child Rarely Talks About Deep Feelings

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Children rarely talk about the deepest experiences of their lives—either the happy or the unhappy ones. That is a form of expression that we acquire with the years—those of us who are fortunate enough to have an understanding family or friends, and who have overcome some natural reticence.

But children don't. By our intuition, or imagination, or by remembering the impact of certain events on us when we were young, we may be able to sense certain invisible emotional reactions of children to which we are sensitive. Or some unusual behavior on their part may provide us with a symptom of disturbance—or even great happiness. But if we depended upon our children's telling us, we would rarely know what goes on deep underneath the surface. I think it doesn't even occur to a child to bare his soul.

It is often only later, when he is old enough to do a lot of looking back, that we may be almost shocked to hear how deeply our own child—or some other boy or girl—was stirred by some experience that we did not suspect had grieved or uplifted him.

I myself have several times said after such a revelation, "But why didn't you tell me then?" And the answer has always been, "I don't know—it didn't seem to occur to me—and then, when I was very little, I guess I thought you knew—I had a feeling that you knew everything."

To be sure some children are more impressionable than others. But also young human nature, on the whole, is quite complex, and it does no harm for us to recognize that fact. I don't mean go around looking for involved states of mind in your children, but realize that there is more to them, as young persons, with thoughts and feelings, than meets the eye.

One specific angle of this subject will be taken up on Monday.

BY ELLEN BRUCE

Crocheted edgings for handkerchiefs may be started now so as to be ready for the Christmas gift season. These four edgings, all in one set of directions, are attractive and simple to execute. Daisy, tulip star flowers, and crocus are the patterns.

For instructions in crocheting the edgings, No. 1130, send 15 CENTS in coin [wrap coin securely] to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

Kitchen Pointers

By Mary Meade

"I like to add fruits and nuts to cakes but have trouble keeping them from sinking to the bottom. How do you prevent this?"

Cut them fairly fine and dust with a little of the flour. Always add them last to the batter. In very thin batters, pour half of the batter into the baking pan, blend the chopped ingredients with the remainder, and pour in on top.

"Are the hard Kieffer pears canned the same way as the Bartletts?"

Kieffer pears must be cooked in boiling water until nearly tender before being cooked in a sugar sirup. [Use the cooking water to make the sirup.] Pack hot into sterilized jars, fill with hot sirup, and process in boiling water bath for 20 minutes.

"What can I do to rid my pantry of flour weevils?"

First you must throw out all packages of flour or other starchy foods in which the weevils are found. Remove everything from pantry shelves, including pots and pans, and wash them thoroly. Wash shelves and walls with soap and water before returning any foods. It's good practice to store any starchy food in tightly covered containers. Then if the weevils appear they cannot escape to the other food.

Double Service Coats Ready for Wet Season

BY REA SEEGER

Fall and winter rains bring out double service raincoats. Most of them will repel not only water but penetrating wind and slush, as well, being made of extra sturdy materials and being waterproofed, thus combining warmth with protection. Much of the cravenette material comes in the neutral tones of beige and has gay, jaunty linings of plaid wool and rayon mixtures which make the coat reversible. Others are made of wool and rayon, specially treated to repel moisture, and there are dozens of sleek affairs of trick koroseal and synthetics that look like and act like rubber. These last mentioned finds come in an assortment of bright and giddy colors as relief from gloomy skies and gloomier street scenes.

A new display of aptly named "aquatogs" is making quite a fashion show because of the eye blinding colors of the cotton plaids of which the coats and rain hats are made. In these coats, designed for the younger crowd, the size range starts with garments for the toddlers. Made of Hope Skillman cotton plaids, they are just about the snazziest raintogs ever unpacked. The colors are brilliant reminders of what successful authentic scotch plaids can be, and the coats are sleek, smart models that will take all the droop out of a dripping day.

The hats are brimmed to wear up or down as flood control. They fit snugly, and stay brisk and sharp after hours in the rain. The coats are belted and precisely tailored with perfectly fitted sleeves, necklines, and enough pockets to pass the most exacting censor. Umbrellas to match complete the costume. Toddlers and the grownup big sister wear the same plaids and styles since the size range is complete. Prices are as easy to approve as the exuberant plaids and color combinations!

Steady Dating Is Betrothal, Junior Grade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

It's an old question, this business of going steady. To some high school fellows and gals it means simply that a fellow gets first option on a gal's Friday nights. Or it may result from a gal's mad passion for collecting things. She has run the gamut of matchbooks, bottle caps, and autograph hoarding, and now turns her talents toward collecting fellows, and fellows' class rings, pins, and letter sweaters.

on the SOLID side

And to still other young characters, going steady is pretty close to being actually engaged, lacking only going thru the motions of a diamond on third finger, left hand, but substituting a class ring instead.

Here's a letter from a gal who is reputedly going steady, but she'd never know it from the way her boy is acting:

"I've been going steady, or so it's called, with a fellow for more than five months. At first I was the only girl he dated; he called every night and I saw him at least three times a week. Recently he has started dating other girls, but when I ask if he'd rather we broke up, he says he wants to continue going steady. One of us must be wrong."

And you're probably both wrong. Going steady should mean that a fellow and girl, after dating many others and looking the field over thoroly, decide that this is to be a permanent arrangement, the stuff that dreams are made on. So they pair off, all moonlight and roses, and with vague plans of home and hearthside after graduation. If it isn't this, then strictly speaking, it isn't going steady. And then comes the question that if it isn't to be permanent, why bother with it at all? It's silly to date under the illusion that you're going steady, while all the time the fellow is dating other girls. So unless you're honestly ready to settle down to dating one fellow or gal, a sort of junior for-better-or-for-worse situation, and to obey all the rules of the arrangement—why, it's time you steadied up. You're off the beam altogether!

FBI MAN BLASTS ROBBER'S CHANCE FOR PROBATION

The probation hearing for Neil J. Bishop, 27, of 7209 Stewart av., was progressing smoothly yesterday in the Criminal court of Judge Charles E. Byrne. Bishop last week was found guilty of robbery. Then an agent of the federal bureau of investigation entered the courtroom.

"This man," he told the court, "is wanted on three automobile theft charges in Texas. Furthermore he is absent without leave from Fort Bliss."

"You can have Bishop," Judge Byrne told the FBI man, "just as soon as he gets out of the state prison at Joliet—where he is going for a one to three year term."

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 2—More customers than ever saw any Minnesota-Michigan football game in the more than half a century the feud has been going on are expected here tomorrow. That means the gate will have to come to more than 84,658, the total that saw the Gophers administer a 7 to 0 whipping to the Wolverines here in 1941.

There are those who say perfect cooperation from the weather man could boost tomorrow's attendance over the all-time Ann Arbor high—the 86,408 atttracted by Michigan and Notre Dame two years ago, but the officially listed hope is 85,000.

Interest Is Traditional

Interest in the game is traditional rather than the inspiration of lofty standing of either of the contestants. Michigan has been knocked off twice, once in the Western conference and once outside the league. Minnesota was thumped last Saturday by Ohio State. Michigan was whipped by Indiana, 13 to 7, in the Wolverines' second game of the season and two weeks ago succumbed to Army's powerful outfit, 28 to 7. The tune of the Gopher setback at the hands of the Buckeyes was 20 to 7.

Despite these falterings, however, each team has a chance for the championship of the Big Nine, tho right at the moment the Wolverines are in fourth place and the Gophers fifth.

Always a Headliner

This battle for the famed Little Brown Jug never needs any buildup beyond the clash itself. Each year's battle is fought on its own merits, regardless of bearing on the Big Nine title. It may be that tomorrow's engagement will have a little special zest on the basis of the prestige of two of the greatest coaches in the land—Fritz Crisler of the Wolverines and Bernie Bierman of the Gophers. A Crisler coached Michigan team never has beaten a Bierman coached Minnesota team. True, Michigan whipped the Gophers, 49 to 6, in 1943, and poured it on somewhat more mildly last autumn, 28 to 13, but Bierman was away with the marines during those two years.

Gophers Win Nine in Row

In the series, which was launched in 1892, Michigan has won 20, Minnesota 13, and two of the contests ended in ties. Nine of the Gopher victories were won successively, from 1934 to 1942, inclusive.

Both teams were reported at nearly peak shape physically today, despite the unfortunate incapacity of the Wolverine captain, Joe Ponsetto, who will be replaced at quarter back by Howard Yerges, his understudy in 1943 and 1944. Yerges directed the team in its three-touchdown drive in the final period against Illinois last Saturday after the Wolverines had been held scoreless in the first three periods.

WARN MIDDIES NOT TO FORGET SPORTSMANSHIP

Cleveland, O., Nov. 2 (AP)—Navy football players, fired-up by reports of dissension in their ranks, were warned today that they must not let their feelings come to the surface in tomorrow's game against Notre Dame in Municipal stadium here.

Capt. C. O. Humphreys, director of athletics at the naval academy, addressed the Middies:

"Look," he told them, "I'm on record as saying you boys haven't been playing the football of which you are capable. I know you are pretty tense about it.

"You are not to let that influence your play tomorrow. Our athletic relationship with Notre Dame is something we treasure a great deal. I want you to remember not to do anything to damage that relationship."

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 2—Del Webb, Phoenix, Ariz., contractor, who shares ownership of the New York Yankees with Dan Topping and Larry MacPhail, predicts that Los Angeles will be the most successful club in the All-America Football conference. . . . "Southern California will have a population of 20,000,000 by 1960," Webb forecasts, "and the climate lends year around interest to athletics." Los Angeles must eventually be in one of the major baseball leagues, too, he opines. . . . There will be no coaching career for Sid Luckman. . . . The Bears' star quarter back says when his playing days are over he will leave football for good. . . ."Maybe I'm thru and don't know it," he says half kiddingly when his mind whirls back over the team's disappointing season. . . . Patty Berg, honorably discharged from the marine corps, is vacationing at her home in Minneapolis preparatory to a swing thru the winter golf tournaments. . . . Pete Pihos, who is playing a great game at full back for Indiana, says his greatest thrill in athletics was catching the pass which beat Minnesota in 1942. . . . He was an end then. . . . Pete's lovely wife, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Indiana, is in her second year of medicine at Indiana's medical school in Indianapolis. . . . Pete won a battlefield commission as second lieutenant in France, but bows to Howard [Stonewall] Brown, junior guard, as the team's most heroic GI. . . . Brown was wounded three times during his service in France and Germany. . . .

Line Coach Red Swanson of Louisiana State says he talked about Charley Trippi all week before the Georgia game and when the team reached Athens, Ga., Trippi's pictures were all over the hotel. . . . Yet when he asked Felix Trapani, Louisiana State guard, if Trippi was hard to stop he asked, "Which one was he, Coach?" . . . Fred Negus, Wisconsin's All-Conference center in 1942, who is a marine lieutenant in the Pacific, plans to return to Madison for two more seasons of undergraduate football. . . . Bill Cox and Gerald Smith, co-owners of the Brooklyn Dodgers football club, have a theme song for their All-America eleven. . . . It's entitled "The Brooklyn Dodgers" and was written by Benny Benjamin, composer of "When the Lights Go on Again," "Strictly Instrumental," and "I Don't Want to Set the World on Fire." . . . Asked at a Monday Quarter Back luncheon if there wasn't a sure way to protect his passers, Coach Bernie Moore of Louisiana State replied, "The surest way I know is to stop throwing passes." . . . The Cubs not only led the National league in fielding and hitting. . . .They had the top batter—Phil Cavarretta—and the two leading pitchers, Hank Borowy and Hank Wyse. . . . But the Detroit Tigers apparently hadn't read the records. . . . Benjamin F. Lindheimer, executive director of Chicago's Arlington and Washington Parks, is negotiating for the purchase of a home in Los Angeles, so he and his family will have a place to live while he is following his Los Angeles football club in the fall and early winter. . . . Lindheimer recently purchased a share of Don Ameche's team.

The Fan

For me, they built a ringside city,
Where strength and courage, matched, played out the game;
For me, they breed fleet footed horses
Who pace the track, and win undying fame.
For me, swift motors burn the highway
With death defying speed, to hold the van.
I am the one whose name is legion—
I am the fan.

Within man's brain is born a story;
For me, the mummer plays his nightly part;
For me, the screen brings forth its triumphs;
For me, a canvas splashed in name of art.
For me, and for my daily pleasure,
And for the game itself since life began
They strive. I say my name is legion—
I am the fan.

For me, they match their wit and cunning;
For me, the line is held against the foe;
For me, they give their best, some take their beating,
But always bravely giving blow for blow.
For me, and for the joy of battle,
For victory's wreath and crown, man strives with man,
I am the one whose name is legion—
I am the fan.

I only ask, when strife is ended,
When rings the gong, when final whistle's blown,
That clean has been the game, the striving,
That thru it all good sportsmanship is shown.
Upon the back I'll pat the also-ran.
I am the one whose name is legion—
I am the fan. —Morrison Ward

Bomber's Moon

Last night a great big yellow bomber's moon
Proudly rode the archway of the sky,
And I wondered if the lads were up again,
That gallant band, far, far too young to die;
These are the nights they always waited for,
And if you've ever known a flyer well,
You realize, that come a night like this,
He'd never rest in his cramped, earthbound cell.

Last night a bomber's moon shone clear and bright,
And I wondered could it possibly be true,
That it was lonely up there by itself
And was luring the lads to some far rendezvous.
On nights like this, when heaven's dome is filled
With kindly stars, each a small blinking light,
I like to think the boys are up again,
Signaling as their ships pass in the night!

Columbus, O., Nov. 2—This city, for many years a stronghold of intercollegiate football, tonight is jammed with thousands waiting to see Ohio State university continue defense of its Western conference championship tomorrow afternoon in the Buckeye stadium against Northwestern. A capacity throng of 74,000, the second sell-out of the home campaign, will see the 23d game of the Northwestern series, of which Ohio State has won 13.

Ohio State's followers tonight are as enthusiastic over victory prospects as they were before Purdue broke their skein of triumphs. The reason is last Saturday's conquest of Minnesota. The unanimous prediction is that the Buckeyes will whip Northwestern, gain another victory two weeks hence over Illinois, and then meet Michigan Nov. 24 for the Big Nine title. In this confident and illogical reasoning, no thought is given undefeated Indiana, which obviously can wreck these aspirations.

Indiana, however, has been a party to the appeal locally which Northwestern brings to tomorrow's battle for the Wildcats tied Indiana, 7 to 7, the only black mark on the Hoosiers' record. Northwestern followed that mildly surprising result with an upset victory last week over Purdue, sole conqueror of Ohio State.

Ohio State's squad, at full strength for tomorrow's game with the exception of a slight injury to Jerry Krall, already had retired at its Columbus Country club quarters when the Wildcats arrived at 10:30 tonight from Toledo, where they had practiced briefly. Thirty-six players were in the group.

McKinley Left at Home

Bob McKinley, who started the Purdue game at left half back, was the only absentee from the squad which licked the Boilermakers and his position will be filled by Bruce Bairstow, who gained 95 yards in 16 attempts against Purdue to become the leading ball carrier for the Wildcats in that game.

Northwestern depends on a varsity whose experience largely dates from the start of his campaign. Five freshmen opened against Purdue and only two players, Dick Connors, right half, and Max Morris, left end, are Northwestern lettermen. Yet this team has the best record in the conference in relation to number of experienced players available.

The Wildcat Line Is Good

After tying Indiana [Northwestern previously had beaten Iowa State, 18 to 6] the Wildcats were whipped by Michigan and Minnesota. Thus the record is one conference victory, a tie, and two defeats against first division teams. This remarkable showing has been based on development of the line. Even Michigan and Minnesota had to resort to passes to gain their touchdowns.

Nineteen year old Stan Gorski pairs with Morris at the ends. Westi Hansen, a sophomore who played four games with Yale last season, and 178 pound Chuck Hagmann are the tackles. Hansen weighs 218 and is the only lineman to approach Ohio State's array of tackles in stature. Paul Schuetz and Jim Lecture, army air force veteran, are the guards while Ray Miller, playing his last game before transfer to Harvard's V-12 school, is the center.

ILLINOIS OWNED HORSES CAPTURE 2 SHOW PRIZES

BY JAMES SEGRETI

Illinois owners accounted for the two feature events on the opening program of the second annual Chicago Horse show before a capacity gathering of 6,000 in the Coliseum last night. The show will continue nightly thru Nov. 11 with matinee performances scheduled today and tomorrow.

Wensleydale Pilot, an 11 year old brown gelding imported from England, owned by John F. Cuneo's Hawthorn Farms of Libertyville, and Hileaha, 8 year old jumper, owned by Si Jayne of Norwood Park, captured first prizes in two of the nine events held with $4,000 in total awards. More than $60,000 will be distributed to winners during the 10 day run.

This One Keeps Winning

Wensleydale Pilot, undefeated in the show ring, continued its victory string by triumphing in the $1,000 stake for harness horses. Citation, owned by Mrs. Loula Long Combs, Lee's Summit, Mo., was second, and Seaton Gem, entered by the Jonsuela Stables of Libertyville, was third. Wensleydale Pilot and Citation repeated their 1944 performances, the pair taking the one-two prizes in the same event a year ago.

Hileaha led a field of 25 horses in taking the jumper event over the Oakbrook course. Ridden by Mrs. Martha Jayne, Hileaha won from leading contenders which included Over Again, grand champion from last year, and Bruce, owned by Mrs. A. C. Thompson of Maywood. Bruce managed to win fourth place, but Over Again, owned by F. J. Anderson, St. Paul, Minn., was unplaced. Our Herbert was judged second place winner, and the Bonham stables' Reject was third.

Austin High school, defending football co-champion of the City league, yesterday clinched at least a tie for the west section crown by defeating Marshall, 28 to 0, in Key Branch stadium.

Harrison Tech, which battled Austin to a 6 to 6 draw earlier in the season, can tie for first place by defeating Steinmetz in Key Branch today. In that case, Austin and the Hornets would meet in a play-off before the league semi-finals.

Returns Punt 65 Yards

Rocco Mavigliano returned a punt 65 yards for a touchdown and Austin scored two points on an automatic safety to take an 8 to 0 lead at the end of the first period.

George Holmgren took Jim Frank's 5 yard pass and ran two yards for a touchdown early in the second quarter, and shortly thereafter Bruce Morrice ran 30 yards for another. These, plus one extra point, gave Austin a 21 to 0 lead by half time.

Frank Runs 80 Yards

The longest run of the day came in the third period when Mavigliano, returning a punt, gave the ball to Jim Frank, who streaked 80 yards for a touchdown.

Gene Siegal of Marshall, one of the leading passers in the league, threw 28 passes, completing eight for 139 yards. This gave him a total of 52 passes completed out of 127 attempted in six games. Lineup:

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 2—The rathskeller championship of the Big Nine, a dubious honor at best, will be at stake tomorrow when Wisconsin's Badgers and the University of Iowa Hawkeyes get together before a homecoming crowd in Iowa stadium. Neither team boasts a conference victory, the Badgers' closest approach thereto being a tie with Illinois and it is this performance that is causing the experts to believe the Hawkeyes have an inside track on the one flight down title.

The Badgers naturally are interested in recording their first 1945 conference success but they also have something else in mind. That's the Big Nine title they didn't win in 1942 because a supposedly weaker Iowa team rose up unexpectedly and thumped them with their lone defeat of the season. That was Iowa's last conference victory. So if the Badgers go point crazy tomorrow it will not be without reason.

Yield 190 Points in Four Games

Since the Notre Dame debacle of a week ago the Iowa lads have been subjected to harsh words from various quarters and, supposedly, they are going to let down their hair tomorrow and make amends but on past happenings that's a man's job. They've got to live down those 190 points piled up against them by Purdue, Indiana, Ohio State, and Notre Dame. Only 45 points have been scored against Wisconsin in all its five games, Purdue and Ohio State being held to two touchdowns apiece.

The Badgers who were bedded down tonight in near-by Cedar Rapids, are supposed to be slightly upset over injuries and defections due to navy transfers but nobody has heard that any one in the Wisconsin delegation, even Coach Harry Stuhldreher, is "fearing." The most marked upheaval in Stuhldreher's plans has been at the ends but even this hasn't been enough to precipitate gloom.

Get Help—and Need It

The sorely pressed Iowans have received a bit of a lift by the prospects of aid from fellows who had been slightly out of whack. It is thought that Nelson Smith, their leading yard picker-upper, will be available as will Obern Simons, another ball lugger.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 2—A crowd of 83,000 tonight awaited the meeting at Cleveland's Municipal stadium tomorrow between two of the nation's three top ranking football teams—Notre Dame and Navy, both of which are scheduled to take on the country's No. 1 eleven—Army—within the next month.

The Navy squad of 44 reached Cleveland this morning and worked out in the stadium this afternoon, Notre Dame didn't arrive until evening.

The Midshipmen are reported to be in the best physical shape of the season. Bob Jenkins, an All-America full back last fall who has been out of competition since the Duke game in early October, and Chuck Kiser, regular left tackle, who did not play in Navy's 17 to 7 victory over Pennsylvania last Saturday, are listed as probable starters.

Dissension Talk Discounted

There has been a lot of talk about dissension or indifference on the Annapolis squad. The rumors grew out of the team's scare at Philadelphia last Saturday, when victory was delayed until the last minute. Notre Dame's Hugh Devore dismisses the whisperings as pure propaganda calculated to give the Middies a psychological bulge.

This is strictly between you and me, and if you can get Betty Grable in on it so much the better, but Devore tonight, when he was asked about the talk of Navy's internal strife replied "Baloney!" You can tell he is worked up about the situation, for an Irishman from Notre Dame who is only two generations removed from the old sod never would talk about baloney on Friday otherwise.

This is a trying week-end for Devore. He not only faces the biggest test of his career as a head coach, but his thoughts must necessarily stray to East Orange, N. J., where his 69 year old mother lies dead. The funeral has been set for Monday to enable Hugh to attend. He will fly home immediately after the game.

Irish at Peak Condition

Notre Dame, with a record of successive victories over Illinois, Georgia Tech, Dartmouth, Pittsburgh, and Iowa, comes up to its 19th game of the series with Navy in top condition. There is only one casualty on the Irish squad—Bill Leonard, freshman right end, who wrenched a muscle in his side on a tackling dummy yesterday. Leonard had been sharing the right end job with Dick Cronin.

Navy, too, has won five straight. Its victims have been Villanova, Duke, Penn State, Georgia Tech, and Pennsylvania. The rivals have played only one common opponent—Georgia Tech. Notre Dame beat the Yellowjackets, 40 to 7, and the Middies won from that eleven, 20 to 6. Both Navy and Notre Dame thus far have encountered only one strong rival. Pennsylvania was the test for Navy and Illinois for Notre Dame. Both escaped by the skin of their teeth, as they say in Brush Creek, Ia.

Don't Forget 1944 Result

There is little to choose between the teams on past performances, but if you like Navy it will bring you 6 to 5 in the betting temples. Cleveland fans are timid about backing the Midshipmen because of their play last week. However, a year ago this time Navy had been beaten by Georgia Tech and Notre Dame came up to the contest with an unbroken string of victories by box car figures. Still Navy won, 32 to 13, and in some ways was more impressive than Army, which a week later overwhelmed the Irish, 59 to 0. No other team ever has cut Notre Dame's line to pieces like Navy did in Baltimore last November.

The Annapolis party in addition to 44 players, and their coaches, Comdr. Oscar Hagberg and Rip Miller, includes Vice Adm. Aubrey W. Fitch, superintendent of the Naval academy; Capt. S. H. Ingersoll, commandant of midshipmen; Capt. C. O. Humphreys, director of athletics, and Capt. M. D. Gilmore, assistant athletic director.

Blaik Scouts for Army

Coach Earl Blaik of Army and four members of his staff are in town for an intensive job of scouting both Navy and the Irish. The other members of Blaik's party are Herman Hickman, Stu Holcomb, Capt. Paul Amen, and Lt. Col. Carl Hinkle.

Heavy overcoats and blankets will be in demand at tomorrow's game. The weather outlook is colder and snow flurries.

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 2 — The Fighting Illini of Illinois and Great Lakes' Bluejackets, who have undergone a variety of vicissitudes during this topsy-turvy football season, will clash at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Memorial stadium.

The Bluejackets, 43 of them, who arrived shortly after noon today, are definitely on the upswing after a rather sorry start which saw them tie Wisconsin, 0 to 0, while losing to Michigan, 27 to 2; Purdue, 20 to 6, and Fort Benning, 21 to 12. Then Lt. [j. g.] Paul E. Brown's sailors began to move, whipping Marquette, 37 to 27, and running away from Western State last Saturday, 39 to 0.

Illini Win Only Opener

Ray Eliot's Illini, on the other hand, got off to a 23 to 6 conquest of Pittsburgh, then suffered three defeats by Notre Dame, Indiana, and Michigan, with a 7 to 7 tie with Wisconsin sandwiched in between the Hoosier and Wolverine losses.

It's been many a day since an Illinois team suffered such a plague of injuries as has harried this 1945 outfit. The Illini line lost one key man after another since the outset of the season, but have bounced back with true Illinois fortitude to make every game a real battle. They lost to Notre Dame only after the Irish had scored on a long first play run; stood off Indiana until the final quarter, and didn't permit Michigan to score last Saturday until the fourth quarter.

Only Three Are Left

Tomorrow only three of the original season starting eleven will be on hand. They are Right Tackle Ralph Serpico, captain; Full Back Jerry Cies, and Left End Bill Heiss. Les Bingaman, 277 pound guard, suffered an ankle sprain in the Michigan game which probably will prevent him from any action, and Lou Agase, left tackle, also will be hampered by an injury sustained against the Wolverines.

The Great Lakes line, averaging 197 pounds per man, will outweigh the Illini forward wall 11 pounds to the player.

'46 Ice Follies Bring Touch of Nostalgia

BY EDWARD PRELL

Nostalgia comes a-running in the Ice Follies of 1946, which opened last night before a sellout, select crowd in Chicago arena. It makes all stops along the nostalgic route and here perhaps is the big reason for the spectacular success of ice productions.

Ice Follies brings back old songs, old, familiar scenes—in fact it is a hodge-podge of Americana. If you don't care much for one act, the next one is sure to please. Its wide range is sure to hit every one dead center at least a few times along the way.

Swing Waltz Scores Again

The proprietors of the Ice Follies—Eddie and Roy Shipstead and Oscar Johnson, were in a nostalgic mood themselves last evening. This is the 10th anniversary of their enterprise, launched with only a few ideas and sharp edged skates. They celebrated it with the presentation of the Swing Waltz, a hallmark of their production from the pioneer days.

The Shipstads, Johnson, and other headliners joined in on this one, which started when the performers stepped out of lacy picture frames at one end of the glistening Arena. The biggest applause went to Bobby and Ruby Maxson. Bobby was celebrating his return after two and a half years with the army transport service.

Evelyn Chandler Returns

It's comeback night, too, for Evelyn Chandler, who has been thrilling Chicago crowds for more than a decade. Evelyn is back after three years absence and her third child, Susie, 3, is traveling with the troupe. Evelyn makes her appearance in the second half of the show and it has the old Chandler stamp. It's called the Steeplechase and it gives her the range to make her famous hurdle jumps, the split, and her other dynamic gyrations.

All that's left of Frick and Frack is Frick, but he has picked up a couple of stooges. Frack, who was the little fellow in the famous act, is so excited over being a father, the show press agent said, that he is taking a year's vacation off the ice.

Everything goes as smoothly as the surface the cast skates on. In fact there wasn't a slip in all those slides and glides. The show will run thru Nov. 18. Last night's opener was a Service club benefit show.

KELVYN PARK, LINDBLOM AND LANE TECH WIN

Kelvyn Park High school's football team closed its west section schedule yesterday by defeating Foreman, 25 to 13, in Hanson park. It was the third victory, against two losses and a tie, for the Kelvynites.

Two of the victors' touchdowns were scored by Larry Lenski, who intercepted a pass and ran 40 yards in the second quarter, and took a four yard pass from Dick Berg to score again in the fourth.

Lindblom finished in second place in the central section, behind undefeated Tilden, by routing Dunbar, 45 to 0, in 83d-Yates av. stadium. It was the fifth victory in six games for the Eagles, who scored in every quarter. In the first period Ray Rizzo went around end for 45 yards for the longest run of the game.

Lane Tech, which lost its north section crown to Schurz, finished in a second place tie with Senn by defeating Sullivan, 40 to 8, in Lane stadium.

Phillips and Englewood completed their central section schedules with Phillips winning, 13 to 6, in Shewbridge field.

Farragut defeated Kelly, 40 to 13, in a central section game in Shewbridge field as each eleven closed its season.

Lowly Bears Have Sell-out for Packers

A complete sellout of all reserved seats was reached yesterday for tomorrow's annual National Football league November game in Wrigley field between the Bears and Green Bay Packers. All that remains are 5,000 bleacher seats at $1.25 which will go on sale at 10 o'clock tomorrow at the ball park.

This is thought to be the first time a last place National Football league team achieved a sellout in its home park. The attendance will approximate 43,000. Last year's crowd, when the Bears stopped the Packers' winning streak at six straight with a 21 to 0 shutout, was 45,553. This included standing room, which has been ruled out for this match. Green Bay and Milwaukee will contribute close to 5,000 fans.

Meanwhile the ticket scalpers, who always try to get fat on this game, were reported moving into action. The market for the better grade of $3.60 box seats was reported to be $8, with an asking price of $6.60 for others not so advantageously located.

The betting, traditionally heavy on this game, was tempting bait for Bear followers, who were being offered eight points.

The Bears are seeking to build up a winning spark to bring their unprecedented plunge to a finish. They brushed up on their offensive maneuvers yesterday and last night held a classroom session in Wrigley field.

The Bears, stung by recent reports of dissension on the team, might use this as a psychological factor to upset the Packers.

Prott Leads Wright to Victory Over Concordia

Wright college football team defeated Concordia of River Forest, 12 to 9, in Rockola stadium last night. Ken Prott, left end, scored both touchdowns for the winners, tallying on a 40 yard pass from Chuck Quanstrom in the third quarter and duplicating the feat in the final period on a 50 yard pitch.

13 NAMED FOR HANDICAP TODAY AT SPORTSMAN'S

Only 13 of the 28 eligibles for today's $5,000 Sportsman's handicap at Sportsman's Park expressed a desire to run when entries for the race closed at the Cicero track yesterday and, as a result, Racing Secretary W. R. Dahlstrom was not forced to divide the race into two sections.

The field in the mile and a sixteenth affair apparently is headed by Mrs. Clyde Troutt's Take Wing, a 7 year old which once earned fame by scoring in the Stars and Stripes handicap, an Arlington Park fixture. Take Wing has raced twice at Sportsman's Park, winning each time without difficulty.

Parasang Highly Regarded

C. U. Yaeger's Parasang, another old timer which once had pretensions to class, looms as a prime contender for this afternoon's race. Second to Take Wing in his last start at Sportsman's, he won an earlier race there and gets in with 112 pounds.

Today's program marks the closing of the regular season of 18 days and, on Monday, the racing will be sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. After the week under this sponsorship is completed, another week of charity racing, to be directed by the track, will be offered.

Jessop Accounts for Double

Yesterday's crowd was little more than 7,500, and wagering was less brisk than usual. Job Dean Jessop, the country's leading rider, rode both winners in the daily double, which paid $28.40. Jessop scored on Liberty Flight in the first race at $3. His mount in the second, Weeping, was placed first after Pete's Kid had been disqualified.

The mutuel handle was $695,014.

Arrange Meet for Catholic Prep Quintets

BY DAVID CONDON

The Catholic league yesterday revealed that plans have been completed for determining its junior and senior basketball champions in a playoff tournament starting March 12.

The new arrangements call for a championship tournament of six teams in each division, the three top junior and senior teams from each section competing.

The winner in each section would draw a bye, and the winners and runners-up would be placed in different brackets, thus making it possible for teams finishing in the top spots in one section to be both league champion and runner-up. Dates and locations:

SENIORS—March 12, first round, Lane Tech gymnasium; March 16, second round, Lane Tech gymnasium; March 19, finals, site to be selected.

JUNIORS—March 13, first round, St. Sabina; March 17, second round, St. Sabina; March 23, finals, site to be selected.

The St. Louis Knights of Columbus have invited the Catholic league football champion, or runner-up, to St. Louis for a game either Thanksgiving day or the following Saturday or Sunday. League officials said the bid probably would be accepted. A Florida school, Hillsborough, already has invited Fenwick, tied for the South section lead, for a post-season game.

INDIANA PLAYS ONE GAME BUT EYES ANOTHER

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 2 [Special]—The Indiana Hoosiers, Western conference football leaders, will play Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Ia., here tomorrow afternoon, but will have one eye on the outcome of the Michigan-Minnesota battle in Ann Arbor.

The Cornell game, scheduled to replace the cancellation of Bunker Hill naval air station last September, should prove little more than a warmup for the Hoosiers' second team while the regulars are getting a good rest for next week's contest with Minnesota.

ENGLISH SCHOOL IN TOKYO OPEN, Y OFFICER SAYS

Will Train Interpreters for Occupation Army

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS

Frank A. Hathaway, general secretary of the Young Men's Christian association of Chicago, announced yesterday that he had received word from Tokyo that the Y. M. C. A. there has reopened its English language school to train interpreters needed by occupation forces.

Watched by Police

"Thruout the war all the movements and writings of Y. M. C. A. leaders were under constant surveillance of secret police," Mr. Hathaway explained. "Their work was confined largely to relief for air raid victims, but they successfully resisted strong government pressure to drop the word 'Christian' from the association's name.

"The Tokyo 'Y' has now resumed several activities, including forums on world affairs, designed to give Japanese youth a Christian world outlook and to help construct a new Japan. Special attention will be given to the spiritual and physical regeneration of the thousands of youths now returning from battlefields and factories. No word has yet been received in Japan as to the status of 'Y's' in other cities, except that several buildings were completely destroyed.

Had 183 Local 'Y's'

Mr. Hathaway said occupation forces will be welcomed to the Tokyo 'Y' swimming pool and gymnasium as soon as air raid damages can be repaired. The 'Y' was established in Japan 56 years ago and expanded into 183 local associations before the war.

DEWEY DEBATES WITH LA GUARDIA ON N.Y. ELECTION

BY ARTHUR EVANS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Nov. 2—Gov. Dewey and Mayor La Guardia engaged in a verbal duel over the radio tonight over the issues in New York's mayoral election next Tuesday.

The governor, speaking for Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, Republican-Liberal-Fusion nominee, ripped into Tammany. "The Tammany Tiger never changes" was his theme song as he asked whether the Tiger and its underworld connections will regain control of the city after being out for 12 years.

Dewey said some enemies of good government have sought to make a mystery about the nomination of Goldstein, a Democrat, on the Republican ticket. He explained that Republicans never have a chance alone in New York, that to win they require fusion, and asserted that three times in 12 years the G. O. P. nominated La Guardia, who in the past had run for office as a Republican, a Socialist, a Democrat, and as a member of the American Labor Party.

La Guardia's Protege

Dewey said the No Deal party on which Newbold Morris is a candidate was "invented for the sole purpose of dividing the forces of good government." Morris is a protege of La Guardia, who is the power behind the No Deal ticket.

As soon as Dewey left the air, La Guardia went on at the same station for a rebuttal. He opened with a remark that at the studio they had braced themselves for an atomic bomb from Dewey but "all we heard was the snap of a wad of bubble gum." From there on the mayor tore into candidate Goldstein as a Tammany hall politician and urged the governor to toss Goldstein overboard and come out for Morris.

"No one is trying to make any mystery out of the nomination of Jonah Goldstein," La Guardia said. "Who told you that, Tom? Somebody's kidding you."

"Jonah Out in Cold"

La Guardia said after he decided not to run again the politicians did not believe it and there were conferences between Republican leaders in New York and Tammany to unite against him if he did run. He said Goldstein at that time was seeking not the Republican nomination but was begging Tammany to put him on the ticket. William O'Dwyer was picked instead.

"And that left poor Jonah out in the cold," said La Guardia. "He started to run around the Republican leaders. So Jonah is really the refuse of Tammany hall, and low as it is there is only one thing lower than a Tammany leader and that is some of the Republican bosses in this city. I say they are lower because they're willing to do business with the Tammany bosses and take the crumbs the Tammany bosses throw to them."

"So that's the mystery of Jonah Goldstein."

PACKARD CHIEF INSISTS ON PAY, PRICE HARMONY

Market Structure Is Threatened

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

Wage increases must be matched by price increases or the national economic structure will break down, George T. Christopher, president of the Packard Motor Car company, said last night at a press conference in the Stevens hotel. He was in Chicago to discuss with dealers the plans for marketing 1946 models.

George T. Christopher

"None of the automobile companies can give as much as a 15 per cent increase in wages and break even if prices are frozen at the 1942 levels," he asserted. "If we don't make a profit, the biggest loser will be the government. You can't tax losses."

[The CIO United Automobile Workers union is asking 30 per cent wage increases and taking votes on strikes to enforce the demands.]

Explains View on Control

Christopher said he believes that control in the relationship between increases in wages and in prices is necessary in industries when labor represents a major portion of the selling costs. He included the automobile industry in this group.

"Increases in wages do not necessarily have to be accompanied by equal increases in prices," he explained. "With proper volume, the price increases can be less than those in wages.

"But if a policy of controled increases in both wages and prices isn't adopted in these classified industries, including the refrigerator, radio, and other lines, the whole market structure is likely to bog down by June, 1946.

"As President Truman said, wages must be increased to sustain the country's buying power and provide the continuous turnover necessary for a live market. But that market can't be built by products on which the producer loses money."

How Costs Are Figured

Christopher said no management wishes to run a sweatshop and every one sympathizes with the worker whose take-home pay has been reduced. The history of the automobile industry shows it was built on volume, paying high wages, and passing on the savings to the consumer thru reduced car prices.

A 30 per cent increase in wages paid by the manufacturers alone would require a 20 per cent increase in automobile prices, he estimated. However, if a 30 per cent wage hike were enforced on the suppliers and on basic industries such as steel, additional increases would be necessary.

Christopher said the value of the raw materials, such as iron ore in the ground and wool on the back of the sheep, is $24 in an automobile which sells for $1,500. The profit of the manufacturer is $126. The remainder is the cost of labor, both in processing the raw materials and in assembling the automobile.

Says Boosts Require Compensation

Thus, any added labor costs in these processes must be compensated for by price increases for the finished product if the manufacturer is to make a profit.

The Chicago region will receive 20 per cent of the total Packard production, he announced. Two weeks ago Packard was producing only one car a day, but now the assembly line is filled and it is hoped that when full production is reached it will turn out 65 an hour.

DISNEY OFFERS SENIOR HOLDERS EXCHANGE PLAN

Burbank, Cal., Nov. 2 (AP)—Walt Disney Productions today offered holders of its preferred stock a recapitalization plan involving exchange of preferred shares for debentures and common stock.

Holders have the privilege of exchanging each share of preferred for $10 face amount of 4 per cent debentures due July 1, 1960, and two shares of common.

The debentures will be a senior funded obligation of the company, unsecured, with interest payable semi-annually. All common stock was held by members of the Disney family until last May, when Atlas corporation bought 25,000 shares at $10 a share with an option to buy 25,000 additional at $12.50.

Martin to Offer Measure Requiring Sale of Silver

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—Rep. Martin [R., Mass.] said today he will introduce a bill Monday to require the treasury department to sell government owned silver to the silver manufacturing industry. He said the measure is designed to release government silver for industrial uses, "including manufacturing uses incident to reconversion and the building up of employment" in the industry.

Mandel Buys 43,452 Shares of Own Stock

Mandel Brothers, Inc., yesterday announced that the company had acquired as treasury stock 43,452 shares formerly held by Robert Mandel, Mrs. Stella K. Mandel, J. Sylvan Kaufman, and Mrs. Jane K. Goldsmith. The price was $18.75 a share, or a total of $814,725. The stock closed on the New York Stock exchange yesterday at $25.50.

Resignation of Robert Mandel as chairman of the board and as a director also was announced. He was succeeded as chairman by Edwin F. Mandel, who had been president.

Leon Mandel Is President

Leon Mandel was advanced from vice president to president. Ben J. Altheimer, for many years general counsel and secretary, was elected a vice president to fill the vacancy thus created. Fred L. Mandel Jr., assistant secretary, was elected secretary. Sidney J. Natkin and John F. Groff continue as vice presidents. Kaufman retired from the board of directors.

Robert Mandel, 74, started to work for Mandel Brothers in 1889 as a stock boy, and advanced thru various positions to general manager and member of the board in 1899. He served as vice president before becoming chairman.

Acquired Below Book Value

"The stock was acquired as a result of negotiations in progress for some time," the announcement said. "The price is below its book value."

Mandel Brothers at the close of its fiscal year on Jan. 31, 1945, had net working capital of $5,287,811. It held $2,951,539 in United States government securities and $509,638 cash. Book value of the capital stock, of which 291,538 shares were outstanding, was $21.97 a share. Profits in the year equaled $1.03 a share.

QUITS SURPLUS POST, PROTESTS VET PROVISIONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—William S. Bradley resigned today as director of the office of surplus property in the commerce department protesting that revised regulations affecting purchases of surpluses by veterans were entirely "at variance with my concept of sound business practice."

The office of surplus property is scheduled to move from the commerce department into the Reconstruction Finance corporation on Monday.

Two specific reasons for Bradley's resignation were [1] Veterans who formerly could buy on the No. 1 priority of the Smaller War Plants corporation must purchase on their own No. 1 priority, below federal, state, and municipal government priorities, and [2] They may purchase single units—for example, a single monkey wrench. Because of lack of man power, Bradley contended, this system would prevent efficient service generally to the veteran.

HOLLAND GETS ANOTHER CREDIT OF 50 MILLIONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—The Export-Import bank today announced an additional 50 million dollar credit for the Netherlands to purchase United States products. The terms generally are the same as were provided under an earlier 50 million credit.

Notes evidencing the first 10 of 30 semi-annual instalments will bear interest at 2½ per cent and will fall due commencing June 30, 1951. The next 10 will bear 3 per cent and fall due commencing June 30, 1956. The last 10 will bear 3½ per cent and mature commencing June 30, 1961.

The bank said it stands ready to sell the Netherlands notes to commercial banks on terms which, it is understood, will be at par plus accrued interest.

OPA MAY HIKE RENT CEILINGS ON NEW HOMES

Would Reflect Rise in Building Costs

Big Gains Forecast

The department of commerce yesterday predicted a 60 per cent increase in construction in 1946 compared with 1945. It estimated 7 billion 300 million dollars would be spent for new public and private construction, and approximately 5 billions for repair and maintenance. William H. Shaw, chief of the department's construction division statistics unit, warned that these goals will not be realized unless manufacturers, dealers, builders, and labor "all work together to keep costs within reason."

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2—(AP)—The office of price administration is considering the fixing of rent ceilings on new dwellings 15 to 25 per cent higher than those on existing homes, it was learned today. The increase would allow for higher construction costs since 1939. The program includes apartment buildings.

This plan was reported as OPA announced a new policy of establishing rent ceilings on homes in advance of construction. Price Administrator Bowles said the new program is designed to encourage building and thereby protect tenants from inflationary rents.

Rent for new units will be based on current ceilings for similar accommodations in the same area, plus allowance for increased construction costs.

Estimated at 15 to 25 Pct.

OPA did not disclose the amount of the allowance, but persons familiar with the plan said it probably will result in rents 15 to 25 per cent higher on new dwellings than on similar old ones.

Up to now, landlords could not obtain a rent ceiling until construction had been completed.

"The new policy is designed to assure ceiling rents on new housing units that are fair to both tenants and builders," said Bowles.

"It will protect tenants during the acute housing shortage from inflationary rents that would result if ceilings were removed. In addition, it provides liberal allowances to builders that will cover war time cost increases."

Bowles said without this "vital" program there would be a "building lag."

How the System Works

This is the procedure:

Builders will present plans and specifications to their local OPA rent office, together with a proposed schedule of rents.

OPA will check the proposals against rent ceilings on similar units in the area and add "an appropriate allowance" for increased costs.

From this, OPA will set the present ceilings.

Bowles said rent ceilings "must continue to be placed upon newly constructed units to prevent discrimination against landlords with fixed rent ceilings and to protect tenants from inflationary rents."

Until Oct. 15, OPA based its rent ceilings on new housing on figures supplied by the national housing administration. Since the removal of construction controls NHA has not set rent ceilings. The new program was worked out because of this, OPA said.

SCARCE DOLLARS FORCING BARTER OF WAR SURPLUS

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Rear Adm. William B. Young, assistant foreign liquidation commissioner for the state department, today said America's surplus war materials in foreign countries may have to be sold for raw materials, bases, trade rights, and even scholarships.

He told the international trade section of the New York Board of Trade "the availability of dollars in most countries is rather uncertain and known to be limited, but the dollar policy may have to be modified considerably from time to time, and most of our surpluses probably will have to go to foreign governments in bulk sales."

"Factors over which we have but small control are compelling us in the direction of these bulk sales," he said. "We lost our biggest potential dollar market—the other United States government agencies—when lend-lease was halted."

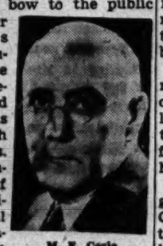
New Chevrolets Go on Display in Dealers' Showrooms Today

The 1946 Chevrolet automobiles will make their bow to the public today in dealer display rooms thruout the country. They include more than 80 refinements and improvements compared with the 1942 models. M. E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet division of General Motors corporation, said the company after solving many reconversion problems is "equipped and prepared" for volume production. The November schedule calls for production of 19,000 passenger cars and 41,000 trucks and 40,000 passenger cars and 44,000 trucks in December.



M. E. Coyle

First Cars Are Lower Priced

Coyle said the first cars coming off the assembly lines are the Stylemaster line—Chevrolet's lowest priced cars. The car for display is a four door sport sedan. As more materials and manufacturing space become available it is planned to broaden production to include town sedans, business coupes, and other types. Later will come the company's senior lines, the Fleetmaster and the Fleetline.

Each model of the 1946 cars will be available in six color styles—three in solid colors and the others in two tone combinations. All models, with the exception of station wagons, have a 116 inch wheelbase.

Substantial changes have been made in the front end. The grille consists of three horizontal bars below which are two wider bars extending almost to the sides of the fenders. The bumper is deeper and higher than any previously used.

The six cylinder valve-in-head engine is retained with refinements. Cast alloy iron pistons are used in the engines, Chevrolet engineers holding that this type wears best and permits engine design which insures maximum fuel and oil economy.

Wheel Wobble Eliminated

The 1946 cars have shockproof steering. The knee action front wheel assembly maintains wheel alignment and eliminates wobble, thus doing away with the chief causes of steering wheel jerk and vibration.

The engine has a four way lubricating system, which uses four methods of supplying oil to moving parts including valves, crank shafts, connecting rods, and pistons. The fuel system embodies a balanced single adjustment carburetor, with air cleaner, silencer and flame arrester. The cooling system has been designed to give more engine mileage, with more uniform cooling provided by full length water jackets.

Charges Draft Takes Needed Plane Experts

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2—An aircraft industry spokesman told a senate subcommittee today that continued drafting by selective service of young, qualified aeronautical engineers was interfering seriously with the country's research and development program and that reconversion was being hampered.

R. E. Gillmore, president of the Sperry Gyroscope company and a member of the board of governors of the Aircraft Industries association, presented a program for maintaining United States leadership in research and development to the war mobilization subcommittee of the senate military affairs committee.

Many Subject to Induction

He told of one aircraft company which lost five engineering specialists to the draft in October and has 25 others subject to induction at a time when it is working on more secret projects for the navy than at any time during the war. Another company has 49 engineers subject to induction, a third has 23, and a fourth seven, he testified.

Gillmore told of reports that Great Britain and Russia are starting vastly expanded aeronautical research programs. He compared these foreign trends with recent drastic reductions in appropriations for army and navy aeronautical research and experimental work.

What Program Includes

His aircraft industry program provided for:

1. Definition of the country's research needs and objectives to enable the public to determine if present research and development appropriations are adequate, particularly in view of the program of other nations.

2. Action to mobilize competitive private enterprise in the job of designing, developing, and producing instruments and weapons needed for national security.

3. Establishment of a clear-cut national air policy to guide the development of military and civil aviation as it will affect the future security and economic welfare of the United States.

TRUMAN SENDS ANGLO-U. S. OIL PACT TO SENATE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2 (AP)—President Truman today submitted the new Anglo-American petroleum agreement to the senate for its ratification. The pact was worked out in London recently by the British and a United States delegation headed by Secretary of the Interior Ickes. It replaces an earlier agreement which President Roosevelt withdrew after it was criticized by industry. It was signed last month in London.

INDUSTRIAL RAYON

Please summarize recent developments in Industrial Rayon corporation's business.—N. F.

Attention was directed recently to Industrial Rayon's continuous process for making viscose rayon yarn by announcement that Courtauld's, Ltd., large British manufacturer, had purchased the patents covering it in Great Britain, its dominions, and continental European countries. Under this process, several manufacturing operations are combined and performed by a single machine.

Industrial Rayon last year substantially completed plant expansion and conversion, started in 1942, by which total yearly capacity was increased nearly 80 per cent to about 70 million pounds of yarn. Of this more than 40 millions was in high tenacity rayon tire yarn. Use of this material in passenger car tires will increase the demand, Hiram S. Rivitz, president, predicted, and the management has plans for additional expansion.

Altho sales increased to $22,433,000 in 1944 from $14,663,000 in 1940, net income declined because of the large increase in federal taxes, but it held above the pre-war level. Profits per share on 759,325 common shares were: 1944, $1.85; 1943, $2.16; 1942, $2.64; 1941, $3.04; 1940, $3.15. In the four years ended with 1939, the profit averaged only $1.18. In the first nine months of 1945 the share earnings were $1.38. The current dividend rate is 50 cents quarterly. Early this year the company negotiated a 6 million dollar serial bank loan.

LABOR, PRICES LIMIT OFFERING OF FURNISHINGS

The International Home Furnishings market in the Merchandise Mart in January will offer few new designs and limited quantities of merchandise, John C. Goodall, general manager of the Mart, said yesterday. However, a record attendance is expected.

Like other manufacturers, producers of home furnishings are handicapped by shortages of lumber, fabrics, and labor in addition to price ceilings, Goodall said. This means most producers will continue to allot merchandise to established accounts.

"Labor and existing price ceilings are the chief bottlenecks," he said. "Even where component materials are the difficulty, the problem goes back to labor. In many factories the man power situation is tighter than it was a year ago. Workers are restless, change jobs frequently, and are loath to return to lower than war time wages."

ASKS WORKERS, FIRMS SHAPE LABOR POLICY

Will Prevent Strife, Says Leiserson

Dr. William L. Leiserson, chairman of the national mediation board, yesterday urged labor and management to guide the government in its labor relations policies and not wait for the policies to be imposed on them. He spoke before the American Transit association in the Stevens hotel.

William L. Leiserson

"Cooperative methods of both groups in meeting common problems, not political pressure methods pursued by each separately, are required," he said.

Other Goals Not Attained

Dr. Leiserson said that collective bargaining, backed by an adequate system of mediation, investigation, and arbitration, is more likely to reduce industrial strife than compulsory legislation. He said the national labor relations act has been "notably successful" in removing the obstacles to labor organization and collective bargaining, but it has not done so well in achieving its other goals—the reduction of industrial strife and free and peaceful adjustment of labor controversies.

This shortcoming has been caused in part by the government's failure to provide expanded facilities for intervention in disputes, with appropriate policies, machinery, and administrative procedures for continuing peaceful negotiations until all effective methods of voluntary agreement have been exhausted.

Urges Distinguishing of Types

Dr. Leiserson commented that the various types of labor controversies must be distinguished. For example, disputes about making and changing collective bargaining agreements need different machinery and methods from disputes arising thru interpretation or application of agreements. Both should be distinguished from strikes.

It is desirable that a companion statute to the national labor relations act be enacted which would impose obligations on employers, workers, and government officials as to their respective responsibilities in mediation proceedings, investigations of disputes, and proceedings for voluntary arbitration, he said. It should also develop and specify procedures for notifying appropriate government agencies of differences that could not be settled in direct bargaining negotiations, he explained.

UNITED TESTS REFRIGERATED CARGO FLIGHT

United Air Lines made a cross country test flight yesterday of a fully refrigerated plane cargo, said to be the first of its kind.

The plane was flown from San Francisco to New York, and carried a full load of perishables packed in five large insulated containers of 1,600 pounds capacity each. The containers, made of glass coated cloth, have pockets in the linings for dry ice and weigh 25 pounds each.

Use of these containers makes it possible to refrigerate a plane fully or partly and provide different temperatures for different commodities, an air line official said. The test flight was a further step in developing movement of perishables by air.

Chicago Corp. Common Gets First Dividend

Directors of the Chicago corporation, the middle west's largest investing company, yesterday enlivened La Salle st. by declaring a 25 cent dividend on common stock, the first since the company was organized in 1929. The payment will be made Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 3.

Richard Wagner, president, said the payment will be a special distribution and should not be "considered as instituting payment of regular common dividends." He added that the payment will be made out of company earnings.

Directors also declared a regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the convertible preference stock, payable Dec. 1 to stock of record Nov. 15.

Favorite Query Answered

For many years one of the favorite questions at annual stockholders meetings of the company in La Salle st. has been, "When are you going to give the common stockholders some cash?"

The diplomatic Wagner each year sought to soothe the stockholders by saying the payments would be forthcoming when sufficient cash was on hand to do so without impairing the company's financial position. And then he would express his "sympathy" with the stockholders' desire to get a return.

Originally incorporated in Delaware, Sept. 11, 1929, as the Continental Chicago corporation, the company has operated under its present name since 1932. It and the companies which it has merged have taken part in the financing of many middle western industrial activities.

Helped Build Big Gas Line

The company now has extensive oil and gas holdings in Texas as well as a broad portfolio of stocks and other investments. It helped finance the construction of the natural gas pipe line built by the Tennessee Gas and Transmission company as a war measure to bring gas from Texas to the east.

Chicago corporation has an authorized 4 million shares of common stock, of which approximately 3,313,000 are outstanding, and an authorized 500,000 shares of $3 cumulative convertible preferred of which about 469,800 are outstanding. The payment on the common stock will require a disbursement of approximately $828,250.

PRICES OF RYE HIGHER; OTHER GRAINS UNEVEN

December, May, and September rye sold at new seasonal peak prices yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade and closed at the top with gains of ⅛ to 1⅞ cents a bushel. December closed at $1.64⅞, a new 20 year high. Other grains were affected by rye, but finished irregular. Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ higher, corn ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, oats unchanged to ⅝ higher, and barley ¼ to 1 cent lower.

STOCK MARKET TRADE WIDEST IN FIVE YEARS

Air Line, Specialty Groups at Peaks

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—The recent strong stock market advance was slowed today, but a late rally enabled prices to edge up further in the broadest trade in more than five years. Air transports and specialties soared to new peaks for more than eight years, but many prominent issues reacted on profit cashing.

Dealings were so heavy for a period soon after the opening that the ticker tape fell behind trading for the first time since July 17. Transfers of 1,840,000 shares compared with 2,210,000 yesterday. Sale of a stock exchange seat for $85,000, equal to the top of July, 1938, emphasized Wall st. hopes.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite managed to advance 0.1 further to 73.6, another top since March 17, 1937. The market was the broadest since May 21, 1940, 1,028 issues registering. Of these, 464 gained and 348 declined.

UTILITY BONDS SET PEAK

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Utility bonds today touched a new high for 1945 in the Associated Press averages, but the advance was narrow in light trading. American and Foreign Power 5s, American Telephone 3s, Commonwealth Edison 3s, and Virginia Electric and Power 2¾s closed up fractions to a point.

Rails, after starting higher, turned irregular and a number of secondary liens showed losses.

CHICAGO STOCKS UP AGAIN

Prices climbed again on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday in turnover of 80,000 shares. More heavily traded issues included Chicago corporation and Admiral, each up ¼, Miller & Hart, up ⅛, and Consumers B and Commonwealth Edison, both unchanged.

ARKANSAS WESTERN GAS COMPANY

Notice of Stock Purchase Rights to Stockholders

Subject to the conditions noted below, the Board of Directors has authorized the issuance and delivery to stockholders of record at the close of business on November 8, 1945, of rights entitling such stockholders or their assigns to purchase for Five Dollars ($5) per share, payable in cash, one (1) additional share of common stock of Arkansas Western Gas Company, par value Five Dollars ($5), for each five (5) shares of such stock held of record on that date; provided, that no fractional share of stock will be issued. Stock Purchase Warrants to purchase one or more whole shares will be issued in the names of record stockholders subject to exercise or to assignment, and Stock Purchase Warrant Scrip for fractional shares will be issued in bearer form subject to transfer by delivery but exercisable only when accompanied by like scrip representing in the aggregate a right to purchase one (1) whole share. Warrants and scrip will be exercisable in the manner and time to be stated therein.

Persons receiving stock certificates of Arkansas Western Gas Company after the record date but at any time prior to expiration of the warrants and warrant scrip, in payment of a dividend in shares of Arkansas Western Gas Company [declared by Southern Union Gas Company, a Delaware corporation, to its stockholders of record on November 1, 1943, and to persons thereafter becoming its stockholders upon surrender of old stock certificates issued by the other merging corporations, as provided in an Agreement of Merger and Consolidation dated September 2, 1942], will not be affected by the record date of November 8, 1945, as to stock so received, but will contemporaneously with their receipt of such stock, if prior to expiration of the warrants and scrip, receive warrants and/or scrip described herein entitling them or their assigns to purchase for Five Dollars ($5) per share, payable in cash, one (1) additional share for each five (5) shares of stock so received.

The issuance and delivery of warrants and warrant scrip is conditional upon formal authorization by Arkansas Public Service Commission of the stock sale involved and upon approval by a majority in interest of Arkansas Western Gas Company's stockholders of an amendment to the Certificate of Incorporation increasing the number of authorized common shares from 106,000 to 150,000, such amendment to be acted upon at a special meeting of stockholders to be held at Dallas, Texas, November 27, 1945. Following such authorization and approval warrants and warrant scrip will be mailed (on or about November 30, 1945) from the office of The First National Bank of Chicago, Transfer Agent, Chicago, Illinois, to stockholders of record on November 8, 1945, and to any other persons who shall have received since that date and prior to such mailing any shares of Arkansas Western Gas Company in payment of the dividend, as aforesaid. If not exercised all the warrants and warrant scrip, and all purchase rights represented thereby, will expire according to their terms approximately 31 days after the date of such mailing. Warrants and scrip to which other persons become entitled, by virtue of receiving Arkansas Western Gas Company stock in payment of the Southern Union Gas Company dividend prior to said expiration, will be mailed or otherwise delivered to them contemporaneously with payment of such dividend.

Because these securities are believed to be exempt from registration they have not been registered, and it is not intended that they will be registered with the Securities & Exchange Commission; but such exemption, if available, does not indicate that the securities have been either approved or disapproved by the Commission or that the Commission has considered the accuracy or completeness of the statements herein made.

Warrants and warrant scrip will be issued for the purchase of 20,611.2 shares of common stock (based upon the total number of such shares presently outstanding) and may be issued for the purchase of an additional number of shares not exceeding 250.6 (based upon the maximum number of additional shares possible to be issued hereafter in payment of the Southern Union Gas Company dividend as set out above). Accordingly, the minimum number of shares subject to sale upon exercise of warrants and warrant scrip is 20,611, and the maximum is 20,861.

It is estimated that the expenses incurred and to be incurred in connection with the distribution of the warrants, warrant scrip and common stock, including cost of preparation and delivery thereof, will not exceed $5,250 or approximately 25 cents per share of common stock which may be sold upon exercise of the warrants and scrip. There will be no underwriting discounts or commissions.

The securities are being offered by and for the benefit of Arkansas Western Gas Company. The net proceeds from the securities will be added to the general funds of the Company and will be used for the acquisition of property, the construction, extension or improvement of its facilities or the improvement of its service.

OPA REFUSES SUGAR TO VET; MUST SHUT SHOP

Winnetka Baker Unable to Continue Business

Because the office of price administration will not allow him to have any more sugar, Arthur V. Richter, operator of a bakery at 801 Elm st., Winnetka, said yesterday that he will be forced to close his doors next week and stay closed until Jan. 1.

"Salesmen assure me that the warehouse are full of sugar, but the OPA nevertheless will not relax its order for a 40 per cent cut in my sugar allowance," Richter said. "I have enough sugar to last one more week. Then I will have to shut down.

Veteran of World War I.

"I'm not the only one who will suffer. Other small business men will be forced to close their bakeries. If the small bakeries close, the big firms will get a monopoly of the bread making business.

"I fought in World War I., I have a 19 year old son on duty in the Pacific, and I have been buying war bonds. Now I have the choice of locking up or buying sugar in the black market.

Sugar Substitutes Scarce

"To pay expenses, I have to sell pastries, which require sugar. I have not made any doughnuts for a year and a half and I am completely out of the business of icing birthday cakes.

"I once hired seven men, but now I can get only two. My bakery has been closed two days a week for a year and a half because of shortages of man power and materials. Sugar substitutes, such as corn sirup, honey, fondant, and simple sirup, are scarce, so I must have sugar.

"My local rationing board says the OPA decisions on sugar allowances are being made by the OPA in Chicago. Unless I get points, the sugar will stay in the warehouses and my customers must go elsewhere."

Police Dump Five Tons of Seized Guns in Lake

Between 4,000 and 5,000 confiscated shotguns, rifles, revolvers, and pistols were loaded on the city tug Fred A. Britton, taken five miles out into Lake Michigan, and dumped overboard yesterday. The weapons, which made three wagon loads, weighing about five tons, represented the police property custodian's accumulation since 1941, when the last disposal of guns was made.

OPEN VERDICT IN SUBWAY DEATH

A coroner's jury yesterday returned an open verdict at the inquest into the death of Mrs. Laura Knoch, 43, of 1023 Division st., who was killed Thursday when she fell off the station platform under an elevated train in the Van Buren st. subway station.

RAPE ALIBIS NOT AIR TIGHT, SAYS EVANSTON COP

Lt. L. W. Calderwood of the Evanston police held yesterday that court alibi witnesses had failed to clear Howard G. Stiles Jr., 16, of 2326 Brown av., Evanston, of charges that he raped an 8 year old girl and attempted to rape a 10 year old girl in the suburb Sept. 16 and Aug. 24.

In the case of the 8 year old girl, who failed to identify Stiles, an Evanston woman testified that the youth visited her home between 4:45 and 5 p. m. on Sept. 16. Then, she said, Stiles departed, saying he was going to another home in the neighborhood, but returned a little later with the announcement that the people he expected to visit were not at home.

Time of Crime Is Cited

"If he did not go to this home," Calderwood held, "Stiles would have had time to commit the crime, which occurred around 5 p. m. The home he was supposed to have visited was two blocks from the crime scene at Bennett av. and Grant st.

"I saw him at 5:05 p. m., one block west of the crime scene, riding a bicycle and perspiring freely. After I told him at the station that it would be better if he told the truth, Stiles admitted this attack as well as the attempted assault on the 10 year old girl."

Release of Stiles in $1,000 bond by Judge Frank H. Bicek of Juvenile court brought a storm of protest from mothers in northwest Evanston. The judge said he would release Stiles unless the state bolsters its case at Tuesday's hearing.

Repudiates Both Confessions

Richard G. Finn, defense attorney, has charged that both confessions were obtained by duress, and the defendant has repudiated them.

In the case of the 10 year old girl, who has identified Stiles as her assailant, alibi witnesses have testified that at the time of the crime Stiles was working in a garage at McCormick rd. and Grant av. Calderwood maintained that it would have been possible for the youth to have slipped out to the crime scene 100 feet away without being noticed.

Stiles has maintained that he appeared at the rape scene because he was attracted by the sound of police sirens. Calderwood claims no police sirens were blown.

Stiles' testimony as to the sirens has been upheld by seven defense witnesses, according to Calderwood. The police lieutenant said he would offer Tuesday the testimony of three squad car drivers and two neighborhood residents that the sirens were not sounded.

Judge Bicek, who had said that, to the best of his recollection, no testimony as to previous sex irregularities by Stiles had been put into the record, announced yesterday that he would have to search the trial record to be sure. Assistant State's Atty. Patrick Egan and Calderwood held that this material had been placed in evidence.

CITY LACKS MONEY TO BOOST EMPLOYES' PAY, KELLY ASSERTS

Mayor Kelly said yesterday he favored a pay increase for the city's white collar workers, but that he believed chances for a boost are slim because of the city's financial obligations. County white collar workers have been assured a 10 to 15 per cent wage boost by county board members.

The mayor said that every effort would be made to get funds for a pay boost and that whatever money is obtained will be distributed equally to the workers.

He explained, however, that the city will need additional funds to pay added police and fire department personnel and that the city must meet the increased wage scale set up for unionized city workers. He said salary increases ordered by the war labor board for mechanics will require almost a million dollars.

In addition, salaries of clerks and bailiffs of the Municipal court who did not share in the pay boost in 1944 have been increased by the legislature.

WAR THERAPISTS TO INCREASE AID GROUPS' SERVICES

Increased facilities for the care of handicapped persons were revealed yesterday in the announcement of the appointment of Maj. Frank J. Morris of Chicago as director of the administrative and field services for the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults and the opening of the society's new offices at 11 S. La Salle st.

Lawrence J. Linck, director of the national society who announced Morris' appointment, said the army major, now on terminal leave, primarily will supervise the development of the society's new employment service exchange. The exchange, which started operation this week, was established in the society's Chicago offices to provide job opportunities for personnel who served in the army and navy and who desire positions in the field of physical medicine.

Fifteen requests for physical therapists, speech and hearing experts, and similar specialists already have been received, Linck said.

McGloon, Pacific Hero, Aid to Public Defender

Atty. Thomas A. McGloon yesterday was appointed as a member of the staff of Francis McCurrie, public defender, at the request of the lawyers' placement committee of the Chicago Bar association. McGloon, recently discharged as a naval lieutenant, is a graduate of De Paul university, and won his law degree while in the navy. He had been in service since September, 1942, and participated in lading operations on Saipan, Tinian, and Iwo Jima.

A JOBS FOR ALL RECIPE: REMOVE U. S. HANDCUFFS

If the federal government would only stop handicapping the inventive and the ambitious, the American people would create job opportunities for every man who wants to work, J. Frank Rushton, president of the Birmingham, Ala., Chamber of Commerce, asserted yesterday.

Addressing a meeting of the Executives' Club of Chicago in Hotel Sherman, Rushton warned that every one wants security and the nation must soon decide whether it is going to obtain this goal thru compulsion by government or thru coöperation and leadership by business.

Raps Wage and Job Bills

He assailed the administration's wage and employment bills in Congress as measures which would not provide employment or insure it, and charged their titles are "pure salesmanship and misleading." The bills carry titles in which words are being used to sell a principle, he said.

The office of price administration, the war labor board, and other war time agencies set up by the government are directly opposed to the principles of liberty, coöperation, and private enterprise, but these agencies are not being eliminated now that the war is over despite propaganda to the contrary, Rushton asserted.

Assails Truman Statement

Rushton assailed President Truman's statement that labor and industry must learn to bargain collectively. "You cannot bargain collectively when the government sits in as a third party and tells both sides what to do," he said.

"If the so-called full employment bill and other measures are enacted into law, you may find yourself committed to something little short of disaster," Rushton warned.

Little business will perish if nation-wide wage scales and price levels are established, and if the nation follows the road of security thru compulsion at home it must follow the same path internationally despite high sounding phrases on why the war was fought, he asserted.

Business men must buckle down to work and make their voices heard among their employes and associates to start a grass roots movement for the preservation of free enterprise, or be led along the other road by men "who know what they want and are willing to risk much to gain it," Rushton warned.

WOMEN MEDICS SET ENROLLMENT MARKS IN STATE

The increased interest of women in the study of medicine as a profession was indicated yesterday in a survey of freshmen medical enrollments at Northwestern and Loyola universities and the University of Illinois, which claims the largest feminine medical class in its 64-year history.

The survey showed an enrollment of 36 freshmen women medical students of a class of 166 at the University of Illinois and approximately doubled women enrollments over those of the last five years at the other two medical schools.

Officials at the University of Illinois said their feminine medical enrollment was the largest class of coeds in the country.

Greece to Be Analyzed in Symposium Tomorrow

The Greek-American council will present Prof. L. S. Stavrianos of the Smith college faculty and Gerhard Schacher, radio news analyst, in a symposium at 8 p. m. tomorrow in Thorne hall, Superior st. and Lake Shore dr. Dean Richard P. McKeon of the University of Chicago will preside. The speakers will discuss "Present Day Greece." There will be a reception later in the social rooms of the hall.

WIFE ASKS $800 A MONTH: MATE TOLD: PAY $80!

Former Ald. Arthur Albert, president of the Standard X-Ray company, was ordered yesterday by Circuit Judge Elmer J. Schnackenberg to pay his estranged wife, Rosella, $80 a month pending hearing on her suit for divorce.

Mrs. Albert has sought $800 a month temporary alimony, saying she needed at least $750 a month to operate her 10 room home at 2100 Lincoln pkwy. Judge Schnackenberg decreed that Mrs. Albert was entitled to $750 a month, ruled that she had an income of $670 a month, and ordered Albert to make up the difference.

Judge Schnackenberg denied Mrs. Albert's request that Albert be ordered out of the family home at 727 Hutchinson st. Atty. James J. McDermott, counsel for Mrs. Albert, said he would appeal the court's ruling on the alimony question.

FUND CAMPAIGN GETS 58 PCT. OF ITS QUOTA

The Community and War fund drive has raised $7,508,904 or 58 per cent of its $13,040,700 goal, Walter P. Paepcke, general chairman, reported yesterday.

Part of the fund raised will go to the United Seamen's service, the U. S. O. of the merchant marine, which is now in the throes of the greatest activity in its history, Paepcke said.

At the same time, Paepcke announced that the third annual exhibition of paintings by merchant seamen of the united nations will be held at the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park, starting tomorrow. At a preview today, members of the women's special gifts division will be hostesses for campaign leaders. Mrs. Philip D. Block Jr. of 1540 Lake Shore dr., and Mrs. R. Winfield Ellis of 70 Cedar st., will be in charge.
